Industry Facing Curbs In Recreation Areas

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Legislation introduced today by Resources Minister Bob Williams will give the provincial government power to curtail industrial operations within designated "recreation areas" throughout the province.

Williams also announced establishment of 10 new provincial parks and a sizable addition to an eleventh. The park extensions have been promised by the NDP government since shortly after last August's election.

The legislation introduced by Williams gives the government power to "prohibit, regulate and control" such industrial operations as mines and logging projects within the eight recreation areas scattered throughout the province. The minister had announced previously a similar policy for resource use within the network of provincial parks.

A major aspect of the legislation is that it solidifies the existing boundaries of provincial parks, so that any boundary changes in the future can only be enacted by the legislative assembly after full debate.

Williams said this measure was incorporated as protection against shrinkage of existing parks as was allowed under the former Social Credit administration.

Atlin (900 square miles), Kwadacha (647) and Tatlatui (408), all in the northern part of the province;

St. Mary's Alpine (35), Top of the World (31), Elk Lakes (21) and Mt. Assiniboine (115), all in the southeastern corner of the province. The Mt. Assiniboine proposal is an extension of a park which already exists.

The total addition of park land is about 1.6 million acres, Williams said. This is a 25 per cent increase in the amount of crown land dedicated to park use. About six million acres of crown land are currently contained in provincial parks.

Williams said the park development by the NDP government "makes up for the lack of action over the last 20 years," under the last government.

He said the parks being established are of "national scale and importance and should have been allowed to proceed by the Socreds." When they were proposed by the parks department, the new park proposals were "invariably turned down," the minister said.

Williams said the legislation specifies that the parks branch will in future have the power to grant resource use permits within the eight recreation areas, which consist of a total of 274,000 acres.

Williams described recreation areas as those areas which have recreational potential but which are not owned by the crown. Land within these areas, he said, is usually owned privately.

ART LOVERS throughout the world united today to mourn Pablo Picasso, the Spanish-born genius who thrust the art world into the 20th Century. Picasso died Sunday of a heart attack at his estate on the French Riviera. Picasso had been in good health and just hours before his death was a genial host at a small dinner party and later worked in his studio until the small hours of Sunday morning. When he awakened Sunday he complained of chest pains and was dead when his doctor arrived 10 minutes later. Obituary, Page 3.

War Chest 'Blown'

Times-News Services

BELFAST — Irish Republican Army officers have apparently spent $375,000 from their war chest on cars, houses and drink, rather than arms and aid for families of imprisoned comrades.

The money came from bank raids.

IRA commanders have suspended three companies of the 1st Provisional Battalion while the missing funds are investigated, according to sources close to the IRA.

First reports that some IRA men had been dipping into funds surfaced in the British press during the weekend.

These said British authorities intercepted a letter containing the allegations which was written by Provisional officer Liam Shannon who is held at the Maze prison near Belfast.

Shannon is reported to have named seven leading Provisionals still at large in Belfast who used IRA money for their own purposes.

Meanwhile, in Armagh, 32 miles southwest of Belfast, British troops shot and killed a gunman today in an exchange of fire. It was the second death in Northern Ireland in 12 hours.

A British soldier died earlier today from wounds received two months ago in a similar exchange of fire with gunmen.

POWER CUT BY FALL?

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) Bernard Goldhammer, assistant administrator of Bonneville Power Administration, says dry winter weather in the northwest United States could mean residential power cutbacks by fall.

Goldhammer said the northwest area is facing the worst hydroelectric power shortage in 33 years due to sparse rain and a light snowpack. Industrial users would be affected first in a cutback.

Robert Ferris, general manager of the Intalco Aluminum plant in Bellingham, predicted widespread power cutbacks in the aluminum industry would result in 4,000 job layoffs. Ferris said 12,000 more workers in related industries also might be laid off.

BPA began some cutbacks in industrial power last week.

"Usually we can sell a surplus of about two million kilowatts to California," said Goldhammer, "but this year we'll have trouble holding our own."

CENTURIES-OLD ceremony of Blessing of the Fleet was held for the first time in Victoria's Inner Harbor Sunday, drawing a crowd of between 5,000 and 6,000. The crowds boarded the spanking clean fishboats, inspected gear and were given tips on how to catch the big ones. Members of the Pacific Trollers Association hope to make the event an annual highlight.

Vietnam Pull-Out Hinted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Unless conditions in Vietnam "improve very substantially" following the death of a Canadian observer, the government will withdraw from the peace commission there, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons today.

He said that without an improvement, Canada would be involved in watching a war "at totally-unjustified human risk," instead of monitoring a ceasefire.

Officially informing the House of the death Saturday of the Canadian officer, Capt. C. E. Laviolette of Quebec City, Mr. Sharp criticized the Viet Cong for firing on the peace commission helicopters and then hindering searches for the wreckage.

Meanwhile two more helicopters assigned to ceasefire teams were fired on over the Mekong Delta today as Canadian members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision hinted it may withdraw from investigations in Viet Cong controlled territory following the death of a Canadian observer when another helicopter was shot down Saturday.

In today's incident, a spokesman for the Saigon command, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, said one of the helicopters was hit by six bullets. He said there was light damage and that no one was hurt.

But Hien said the helicopter landed near Vi Thanh, 98 miles southwest of Saigon, as a precautionary measure. Other military sources, however, said the helicopter was destroyed.

Michel Gauvin, chief of the Canadian Delegation to the International Commission for Control and Supervision said today the ICCS helicopter shot down Saturday had prior Viet Cong assurance that they would be safe.

"If guarantees of security are withheld by a party, can anyone expect the commission members to act?" Gauvin asked in a speech in the Saigon Lions' Club.

"Frankly," he continued, "we are not prepared to risk the lives of our officers because a party cannot, or will not guarantee their safety in the course of an investigation."

Nixon Seeks Tariff Powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) President Nixon will send to Congress Tuesday a formal request for authority to impose selective trade barriers against countries which he feels discriminate against United States goods.

Nixon also will meet at 8:30 Tuesday morning with the Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to discuss the bill.

Administration officials said previously that Nixon wants authority to negotiate reciprocal reductions in tariffs and other barriers to international trade.

But they said he also wants stand-by authority to increase tariffs if he believes a nation is not giving a fair chance to U.S. business or labor.

Drug Bill Read

Legislation to set up the provincial government's recently announced Alcohol and Drug Commission, which will co-ordinate all provincial efforts in dealing with the problem of drug dependency, was introduced today by Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi and given first reading in the legislature.

Levi told reporters the five-member commission, under a full-time chairman, will administer all money now being spent through five departments of the provincial government and will also ensure that all federal government funds available to B.C. for drug dependency programs are integrated in the provincial program.

He said figures compiled by the B.C. Research Council show that some $3 million in provincial governments grants is now going to 84 separate agencies dealing with various aspects of treatment and research for addicts. That includes about $400,000 from the perpetual fund for drug, alcohol and tobacco education set up by the previous Social Credit administration.

All these funds, Levi said, together with any others from consolidated revenue which receive legislature approval will be under the control of the commission.

Levi said the commission — which he hopes will be functioning by June — will get applications for government assistance and its field staff will work through the proposed network of community resource centres in identifying areas' individual needs and then setting up local community programs.

Plane, Embassy Hit by Arabs

Times News Services

NICOSIA — Arab guerrillas attacked an El Al Israel airliner and the home of the Israeli ambassador with bombs today. At least one Arab was killed and four were captured in the fighting.

Police said the simultaneous attacks at 6 a.m. Victoria time rocked the city with bomb blasts at the home of ambassador Rachamin Timor and touched off a gun battle at the International Airport outside Nicosia.

The twin explosions were said to have caused considerable damage to homes adjacent to those of the ambassador, but police said no one was hurt and two Arabs were arrested fleeing the scene.

The attack on a Viscount airliner that had just arrived from Tel Aviv touched off a running gun battle that raged for several minutes between guerrillas and security guards.

First police reports said one Arab was killed on the spot and as many as four were arrested.

An El Al spokesman in Tel Aviv said two or three other Arabs were captured in the shootout at the airport.

"The Arabs took over a civil aviation jeep and drove up to the plane, a rented Viscount that had just arrived from Tel Aviv," he said.

"They fired a volley of shots at the plane but didn't hit anybody. One Arab was killed on the spot."

Earlier today a Greek-Cypriot was killed and three policemen were wounded when an armed group of Greek-Cypriots tried to storm a police station 30 miles west of Nicosia.

Bank Boosts Rate

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce today increased its minimum lending rate by one-half per cent to 6½ per cent, effective immediately.

The bank said no increase is contemplated, at this time, in the rate charged for its Bank-plan personal loans.

The bank also said it will increase the interest paid on its savings accounts to 4½ per cent from four per cent, retroactive to April 1. Interest paid on chequing-savings accounts will increase one-quarter of one per cent to three per cent, effective May 1.

A spokesman for the bank said the rate increases have become necessary due to the continuing pressure for loans and are in "harmony with recent changes in the Bank of Canada's interest rate."

The Bank of Canada increased its lending rate by one-half per cent to 5.25 per cent Friday.

"No material change in the outlook for the bank's balance of revenue is anticipated as the increased revenue generated from loans will be more than offset by increased interest charges."

Second World War Bomb Kills 2 Boys in Vernon

Times News Services

VERNON — Two boys aged seven and nine were killed Sunday when a mortar shell they had picked up on an army testing ground unused since the Second World War exploded as they carried it home.

The deaths of Dwayne Willment and Bradley Hanke sparked demands here that the army make a thorough scouring of the range to prevent similar tragedies.

Ten years ago, following the deaths of two other boys in a similar mishap, an army search turned up 84 live bombs on the range.

RCMP said similar objects turn up in the area frequently. They said farmers have reported plowing them up and youngsters have carried similar objects home.

Colonel David Carr, commanding officer at Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack, said a base security officer has been sent to the area to conduct an investigation.

He said if there is a possibility of other dangerous objects in the area the base may be closed.

Vernon RCMP Staff St. Bob Cruickshank described the bomb as a "cylindrical projectile" made of metal about eight inches long and 1½ inches in diameter. Bomb-type fins were attached to one end, he said.

Cruickshank said quite a few such mortar bombs have been found in the area during the last 10 years, "but we don't hear about them until they go off.

"The army went over the area with a fine-tooth comb, but obviously it wasn't fine enough."

He warned anyone finding any strange-looking objects near the army site, about three miles south of Vernon, to "leave it alone" and call police.

A City Under Siege . . .

By H. D. S. GREENWAY

PHNOM PENH (WP) — Phnom Penh has become a sullen city. The insurgents are on the offensive and all the roads leading to the capital are cut.

The government first announced a state of siege and then, last week, a state of danger — the difference being that the government is allowed to shoot people during a state of danger.

On the surface, this city's life goes on much as usual, perhaps more slowly now in the season before the rains. Nowhere in the capital can one sense a state of siege. No one seems to feel the imminent danger that could be sensed in Hue during last year's Easter offensive. Refugees seem unlikely to pour out of Phnom Penh, perhaps because in Cambodia there is nowhere to go.

Instead there is a general malaise. The people seem to have lost confidence in their government, their country and even in themselves. There is a weariness and lethargy which is unusual even for Cambodia where torpor is a natural state.

"The population is disgusted, Monsieur," a civil servant said. "We are sad because the government has lost the power to help the people."

Delays in the arrival of supplies have caused fuel shortages and rationing and there are long lines of automobiles in front of all the city's gasoline stations.

There are also long lines of people with cans, bottles and pails waiting to buy kerosene for their lamps. The pumps are cranked by hand because every day the electricity fails with increasing frequency.

$2.5M Paid, But Another Kidnapped

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Another executive of a foreign company has been kidnapped in Argentina. The kidnappers are believed to be left-wing terrorist groups who collected $2.5 million in ransom from United States companies last week.

Police said three or four young people seized Francais Brimicombe, a 57-year-old Briton, outside his suburban home Sunday night as he returned from the golf course. He is president of the Argentine subsidiary of the British American Tobacco Co. and has lived in the country for 30 years.

He was the 25th kidnap victim in Argentina this year.

An official of the company said there was no word Sunday night from the kidnappers, but it is believed they are left-wingers seeking another big ransom to finance their underground activities.

Two such terrorist groups extracted $1.5 million from the Eastman Kodak Co. and $1 million from the First National Bank of Boston last week in exchange for the release of two executives.

Kodak announced Sunday that Antony Da Cruz, 43, second in command of the firm's Argentine subsidiary, was released Saturday night after six days of captivity during which he was treated well.

Like Kodak, the First National Bank of Boston said it paid its ransom in dollars and pesos packed in suitcases. Gerardo Scalmazzi, 55, an Argentine and the manager of the bank's branch in Rosario, was released unharmed Wednesday after eight days of captivity.

At almost the same time Brimicombe disappeared, President-Elect Hector Campora asked in a nationwide address for calm in the wake of a new wave of violence.

Earlier, Campora asked for an extremist "truce" after his government takes office May 25 to give it a chance to carry out its program, much of it drawn up by exiled former president Juan Peron.

Of five major guerrilla groups currently active in Argentina, three describe themselves as supporters of Peron's policies or political movement.

Business sources said foreign companies spend as much as $10,000 a month on security, including as many as three armed guards for top executives.

Oil Pact Signed

NEW DELHI (AP) — India signed a contract with Iraq here Sunday acquiring the rights for oil exploration in the southernmost parts of its desert land. The area adjoins Saudi Arabia about 150 miles west of the famed Burgan oil fields of Kuwait. The $8 million initial project will include exportation, appraisal, development and production.

CITY POSTIES PICKET

Postal workers began picketing the main post office in Victoria today to protest a management refusal to hire more full-time inside staff.

Stan Darlington, president of the Victoria local of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers, said up to 2,000 hours of overtime has been worked each month for the past year, demonstrating the need for more staff, but budgetary restraints imposed by the western regional office is preventing the hiring.

Darlington said he has a letter from the personnel office in Ottawa stating there is no "freeze" as such on further hiring, and that local Victoria management is in favor of increasing the full-time staff to cover the extra work load.

Some casual staff have been hired.

The complaint is not connected with contract negotiations, since a 33-month agreement was signed in March.

But Darlington said the union has been discussing the subject of increasing the inside staff for the past year.

This has produced a "run-around and doubletalk," he said.

Postal officials were not available for comment this morning.

Super Agency Needed To Preserve Forests

A new type of government super-agency is needed in B.C. to ensure that management of forest lands reconciles the needs of the forest industry with those of fish, wildlife, and outdoor recreation, the legislature's standing committee on forestry and fisheries was told today.

The proposal was contained in a 15-page brief submitted by Dr. James Hatter, director of the provincial government's fish and wildlife branch, which also called for formulation of a major policy with regard to forest lands.

Hatter said for many years the "tacit and unstated policy" has been to promote the maximum continued production of wood products and, until recently, such a policy has been in the public interest.

"However, it is apparent that a unilateral policy no longer meets the needs and desires of the times, even if the continued production of wood products is still of paramount importance to the economy of the province," he said.

"There is now a need for government policy to articulate the contemporary public conceptions and desires that forested lands be managed not only to produce wood products, but also to protect and sustain our wildlife and fish and to provide a variety of satisfying outdoor recreational experiences."

Hatter said existing government agencies are "inherently unilateral in approach" because they are primarily concerned with the single resources they manage. Although all resource agencies try to work together in the common interest, their individual concerns make compromises "difficult or impossible to attain."

This, he said, results from the fact that "there is no agency with the responsibility, authority and capability to promote the compromises required in the overall public interest."

Hatter said the new agency should have not only the technical capability in all aspects of forest management, but also the authority to override, if necessary, the interest of any single resource agency.

One of its first priorities should be to develop practical guidelines, based on the new policy approach, for both the planning and operational aspects of logging.

Supply Ships Run Mekong Gauntlet

With U.S. warplanes flying air cover, three battered supply ships edged nervously up the Mekong River foward Phnom Penh today under a gauntlet of Communist small arms and machine gun fire.

The vessels were part of a 19-ship convoy which started out Sunday to break the stranglehold on Phnom Penh. Only five made it and the rest were forced to turn back. One ship was blasted to bits Sunday and another was set afire today.

Ironically, the two cargo ships which reached the capital Sunday were not loaded with "vital" products. As the two ships were unloaded this morning, 150 cases of glass beads for women's evening bags, 15,200 gallons of fresh cider, enamel bathtubs and more than one ton of gourmet groceries destined for foreign missions here were among the cargo.

There was no rice — the staple of the Cambodian diet — on board either ship, but the cargo included 220 drums of pork lard, 7,778 bags of wheat and 1,500 cartons of powered milk.

Meanwhile, there are rumors everywhere of impending trouble during the Cambodian new year next weekend. The government has extended the curfew and now people must be off the streets by 8 p.m. instead of 9.

In some respects, the government has almost ceased to function. Government is by decree and civil servants arrive in their offices late and go home early. What little interest they could find in their work seems to have fled.

"Last year we were full of hope, but now . . ." a civil servant said shaking his head.

More and more, the general dissatisfaction is being focused against Cambodian President Lon Nol and his younger brother, Lon Non. In the past Nol has been immune from personal criticism and responsibility for events, but no more.

People who supported Nol when he came to power in 1970 now say privately that there must soon be a change in personnel if this government is to survive.

Last week, 16 members of the royal family, who were put under house arrest following the March 17 bombing of the presidential palace by a disgruntled pilot, were hauled off before a military tribunal. Their fate is still in doubt.

Inflation, corruption and war have sapped the national purpose and the army has not escaped the rot.

Corrupt officers leave their troops for their new villas in the capital and, more and more, the army refuses to fight. The more the U.S. uses its massive air power here, the more the Cambodian Army comes to depend on it.

The Cambodian chief of staff, general Sosthene Farnandez, said Saturday that the military situation is far better now than it was in 1970.

"Then we had no troops, no time and no one to help," he said. "At that time the Americans had not come in and the Viet Cong came at us in division strength."

Montreal Kidnap Attempt Foiled by Daughter, 14

MONTREAL (CP) — Three masked and armed men who attempted to kidnap a bank manager and his family surrendered early today, three hours after the family's oldest child crawled out her bedroom window and informed police.

Police said the drama began late Sunday when the three men slipped into the suburban Longueuil home of Roland Grenier, manager of a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch in a nearby shopping centre.

They bound and blindfolded Mr. and Mrs. Grenier and their two sons, Pierre, 11, and Alain, 7.

Joanne, 14, saw the men inside the house, crawled out her window and ran to a neighbor's house to call police.

The house was surrounded by 20 police officers and the three men were persuaded to surrender by Det.-Sgt. Leo Babin who telephoned the house three times to speak to the men.

On the last call, one of the men said: "I'll smoke my last cigarette and me and my friends will come out."

the weather

Clouds and occasional rain or drizzle are present today over the north coast while colud cover over the remainder of the province is variable. A weakening frontal system offshore is expected to work its way across B.C. over the next two days with a general increase of clouds. Rain, however, will be confined mainly to the outer coastal areas.

Rarely in the history of art has one man dominated a century as Picasso did this . . .

'From Childhood a Master'

By STEPHEN KLAIDMAN
Washington Post

(The writer lived in Spain while on leave from The Post, where he is now an assistant foreign editor.)

Rarely in the history of art has one man dominated a century as Picasso dominated this one. Giotto, Leonardo, Michaelangelo and Rembrandt were his predecessors.

His renaissance draftsmanship, his cosmic gifts of invention, his extraordinary grasp of visual and spatial problems, his limited but powerful symbology, his exceptional range and depth of insight, feeling and expression, marked Picasso from childhood as a master.

His accomplishments were so vast in so many media that they virtually defied cataloguing.

Had he been a sculptor alone, or simply a ceramist, his name would be known the world over.

Had he not invented cubism or had a Blue period, he still would have been the preeminent artist of the 20th century.

But he was, of course, more than a sculptor and ceramist.

He was first and always a painter. He was also an etcher, lithographer and draftsman, a theatrical designer, poet and playwright.

In a word, he was Picasso.

Picasso revolutionized art without rejecting the past. He just flowered in ways no one had previously imagined. Picasso was a Classicist in a Romantic world. All around him color was king, but he asserted the primacy of space and form.

He achieved greatness as a painter of portraits, landscapes, interiors, still lifes, mythological inventions, bull fights, acrobats, owls, musical instruments and — above all — women.

He painted them realistically, manneristically, surrealistically, publically and neoclassicly.

He distorted, idealized or captured them with an attention to detail so minute and rigorous as to strain credibility.

He executed works of extraordinary dimensions on the predominant social themes of his time, and doodled, albeit delightfully, on clay plates and lithographers' stone.

He was mercurial but not etherial, elusive but not ephemeral.

He was, in many ways, a work of art himself, expressive of the human condition, but beyond facile definition.

Tender, childlike, cruel, sensual, mocking, understanding — every man is all of these things, but in Picasso, each had the magnitude of a dominant characteristic.

He shaped 20th century art not only through the strength and variety of his work, but through the force of his personality and individualism.

He borrowed from other artists, both living and dead, never apologized, and metamorphised their ideas into his art.

It is idle to speculate how Picasso's work will survive the erosion of time, but his historical importance is already established.

His contribution to abstract painting, the greatest revolution in art since the development of perspective and the humanization of the Renaissance, surpassed that of any of his contemporaries.

Picasso, more than anyone else, symbolizes a revolution that has changed more than art, it has changed the way people look at the physical world.

When he was criticized it was mainly for repetition or triviality of themes. He did not paint heroic celebrations, and with the exception of Guernica, that searing masterpiece on the horrors of modern warfare, his large socially inspired paintings were not among his more important works.

There were those who tired of his fauns, satyrs and minotaurs, of his horny artists and their nubile models, but they were always expressed in a way that fully captured a mood or an emotion or a complex of feelings, therefore they were never the same.

Picasso didn't tire of the human comedy, which was his real subject matter. During the Blue period in the first years of the 20th century he painted scenes of sadness, wretchedness and despair.

He returned to that mood now and again over the next 70-odd years, but mainly he recorded the foibles and weaknesses of all manner of men and women, sometimes with tenderness, sometimes with irony, but never with scorn.

Je was deeply committed to life and such a believer in the efficacy of art that he once said: "The time will come when the sight of a painting will ease the pain of a toothache."

Was the remark forthright or ironic? With Picasso, who can tell?

Ironic, or otherwise, his work always remained human. It never became totally abstract. There was always something, even in the most thoroughly analytical cubist painting, that was recognizable as part of the real world.

Sometimes it was only a suggestion painted in at the very end, but it was always there.

One of his mistresses, Francoise Gilot, recreated this Picasso quote in her book My Life With Picasso: Whatever the source of the emotion that drives me to create, I want to give it a form that has some connection with the visible world, even if it is only to wage war on that world."

Cubism and distortion of the human anatomy and physiognomy were the two areas in which Picasso outraged critics and public alike before his work became more widely understood.

He was accused of being a dehumanizer of art and a worshipper of ugliness.

Ultimately, however, it was recognized that analytical cubism was an effort to create new forms, to expand the scope of human vision and insight by breaking down reality into its constituent parts and arranging them in such a way as to give the viewer multiple vision — to show him the impossible, the back of the barn simultaneously with the front and both sides, so as to understand the true relationship between them. It went a step beyond perspective.

Picasso's distorted faces it was also realized later on, were not an attempt to celebrate ugliness.

They have to do with the notion of semblance, or pictorial reality as opposed to nature, and a very special understanding of what is important plastically and psychologically in portraiture.

Semblance, in this case, means simply capturing the feeling or mood of life, as opposed to precisely recording features.

Picasso distorted to create the desired plastic and psychological effects, but never lost and sometimes even enhanced thereby the semblance of reality.

An immense nose or a seemingly outrageous hat in a Picasso portrait should be understood with this in mind.

He produced more than 6,000 paintings, innumerable drawings and graphics, sculpture, ceramics and collages ad infinitum it almost seems.

He released his works to the world at a leisurely pace, keeping much of the best for himself, but so extraordinary was his output, so widespread were the reproductions of his pictures, so profound was his influence on other artists in all media, that his presence seemed boundless.

★ ★ ★

He was born on Oct. 25, 1881, in Malaga, which today is the capital of the heavily touristed Costa del Sol, but then was a sleepy Andalusian coastal town.

Jose Ruiz's father, and two uncles of young Pablo, had all wanted to be professional painters, but none succeeded. Picasso's father did succeed, however, at least to the extent that he became a reasonably well respected teacher of art.

And more than that, he could see in a way most people are never able to see. He drew things as they were, not according to preconceived notions of how they are or ought to be.

His earliest sketchbooks, or his portrait of Aunt Pepa, done at 14, show such commanding skill, and in the case of the portrait, psychological insight, as to be entirely uncanny.

He was a finished artist at 14 — whatever learning he would do from then on followed his own instincts and intellectual bent.

His formal training, begun under his father, continued at La Coruna's school of arts and crafts and the School of Fine Arts in Barcelona, where his father taught.

Bull or Bear?

Few sessions of the B.C. Legislature have produced such a flood of controversial legislation as the present one under the new NDP government, and few of the bills presented carry more far-reaching implications than the one Mr. Barrett introduced last week. This was an amendment to the Revenue Act which would permit him, as finance minister, to invest surplus funds of the government in any corporation of his choice.

The legislation as presented is wide open, since no maximum amount is specified and no restriction is placed on the size or type of business enterprise in which public money may be invested.

Mr. Barrett has presented the measure as an alternative to "handouts, grants, concessions, subsidies or gifts to private industry." Many a taxpayer would agree with that aspect of the legislation. But the means by which Mr. Barrett wishes to ensure that aid to industry will automatically mean government ownership of a part of the corporation must cause concern among businessmen and the public alike.

The degree of autonomy given the finance minister is unusually wide, and there appears to be no provision for bad judgment which might lead to losses of public funds. The government's acquisition of even a small block of stock in any company might well prove to be the kiss of death, at least on the stock market, since investors could interpret the move as the beginning of the end of the company as a private one. Dr. McGeer, the Liberal member for Vancouver-Point Grey, points out that the surplus from consolidated revenue this year could reach $180 million and "that's a fair amount of money to gamble with."

Dr. McGeer described the amendment as a "blank cheque bill." It would, in effect, take control of the surplus funds entirely out of the people's hands since the Legislature would have no say in what was bought. Mr. Barrett said this was in line with British parliamentary practice, but while the government clearly has the power to carry on the business of the province, the present problem is one that raises important questions.

One of these is how far does Mr. Barrett plan to go in socializing British Columbia? He has never defined the limits to which he intends to carry his policies. The pace of the present legislative session suggests that he is racing against time to get his program irrevocably established before the passage of four years brings a general election into view.

The face of the province will have changed drastically if the current trend is maintained. At the moment the chief prospects include heavy costs placed on income earners to finance the socialist program, and a marked reluctance of private investors to risk their money in a province in which the future is so uncertain. There are many aspects of Mr. Barrett's general program which have a wide appeal, but they are offset by public concern regarding the depth to which the possible economic consequences have been investigated. Some of the paths we are getting onto could be pretty slippery.

Highrises and Fires

Vancouver-Point Grey's Liberal member, Garde Gardom, has expressed deep concern in the legislature over the condition of some highrise buildings in this province, contending that among them are structures that are no more than "glorified furnaces." He says "ghastly consequences" could ensue from fires in them.

It is proper that a public figure should draw atttention to such buildings, but to avoid general anxiety among those who live in highrises, it would seem prudent to identify those in which the risk is high.

Authorities in Victoria report that highrise apartments here are required to conform to exacting standards set in the National Building Code, are equipped in a manner which Mr. Gardom recommends and are further protected by courses given by the fire department to those entrusted with the safety of premises and occupants. They are not, say the authorities who make inspections during construction and at regular intervals thereafter, "tinder boxes."

It is still possible for combustible contents of any suite to catch fire, with results depending largely on how the occupant responds to such an outbreak. But suites reportedly are so constructed and so equipped that a fire in one can be contained in that unit alone for 45 minutes and communication systems are installed to warn residents to leave.

There is no absolute guarantee against fire, either from smokers' carelessness or cooking accident, but within their jurisdiction Victoria authorities believe the possibility of tragedy is virtually limited to the actions of an individual in any suite in which a localized outbreak occurs.

For the peace of mind of tenants, owners and caretakers, it would be useful for Mr. Gardom to indicate where in this province the dangerous structures exist. Certainly, if some highrises fall below the standards set by the National Building Code, or fail to satisfy informed and experienced fire officials, they should be drawn specifically to the notice of those entrusted with safety maintenance. In the meantime, occupants might usefully consider taking full advantage of informative courses that are available to them.

Pipeline Battle: Phase Two

WASHINGTON — The controversial Trans-Alaska Pipelines TAPS has been tossed squarely into the lap of Congress by the United States Supreme Court.

The refusal of the Supreme Court last Monday to review a lower court decision that halted construction of the oil pipeline forces Congress, for the first time, to take a position on the issue. Members of Congress, urged on by President Nixon, must now decide whether to amend or pass new legislation which would bypass the 1920 U.S. Mineral Leasing Act.

Ecologists and their supporters opposed to the 789-mile pipeline have welcomed the court's decision. However, there is a pessimistic awareness that proponents of TAPS have the upper hand in the Senate and House of Representatives.

The Mineral Leasing Act, which has brought the project to a halt — at least temporarily — sets a limit of 54-feet in width for the corridor along the route of pipelines on federal lands. Modern construction techniques developed since the legislation was passed more than 50 years ago would require a wider tract of land.

Move Ahead

Senator Henry (Scoop) Jackson of Washington, chairman of the Senate interior committee, has announced plans for hearings later this month on proposals to bypass the Mineral Leasing Act and allow work on the project to move ahead.

Several bills will be under consideration, including one by Alaska Senator Ted Stevens which would declare the environment issues of TAPS settled. Permitting the wider corridor necessary for the pipeline, it would also bar further court review of issues raised by the National Environmental Policy Act.

Senator Stevens, TAPS and congressional insiders give the Stevens bill a good chance of receiving approval in committee, opening the way for a vote on the issue in the Senate.

This does not mean, however, that the environmentalists and their congressional friends aren't planning a valiant fight against the pipeline.

Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin is planning to speak out strongly against what he views as the environmental dangers of TAPS. One Proxmire aide this week has compared the fight they intend to mount as similar to the senators successful bid to cancel the SST supersonic jet. However, the aide added pessimistically, "what big oil wants big oil tends to get."

Joining Senator Proxmire in the battle against TAPS will be another prominent senator, Walter Mondale of Minnesota. Rather than a pipeline to move oil from Alaska's North Slope to the south coast of the state for shipment by tanker down the Pacific to Cherry Point, Washington, and other places, he would like to see a trans-Canada route down the Mackenzie Valley. He plans to present the interior committee with a bill which would authorize feasibility studies for such a route and permitting the extended corridor required by TAPS only when all environmental requirements have been met.

Aside from the environmental concerns of these Mid-Western senators, they feel that Alaska oil should be fed directly to their area of the country — plagued by petroleum shortages this winter — with a branch to the northeast.

In the House last week, Representative Les Aspin of Wisconsin welcomed the Supreme Court refusal to review the lower court ruling of Feb. 9.

He declared that Congress must now choose between "the Alaska route with all its environmental hazards or the Canadian route which is both economically and environmentally superior to the Alaska route."

However, Alaska Senator Mike Gravel, who plans to support the Stevens bill to facilitiate TAPS construction, said he looks forward to the forthcoming Senate hearing to "remove the fog of emotionalism" that clouds the issues.

Senator Gravel said Wednesday that the committee should take up the environmental issue of TAPS while studying whether to permit the wider corridor. By so doing, Senator Gravel apparently hopes to head off another possibly lengthy delay in building TAPS even if Congress decided to bypass the 1920 Mineral Leasing Act.

The lower court ruling, which the Supreme Court refused to review last Monday, dealt only with the question of how wide the right-of-way corridor for the Alaska pipeline should be. It did not deal with any of the environmental issue raised by the project.

Environmentalists almost certainly will try to bring the question of TAPS ecological impact before the court. Even if the provision of the Stevens bill — barring further court review on issues raised by the National Environmental Policy Act — is voted into law, its legality would undoubtedly be questioned.

Legal Conflict

"Can one law be used to erase the effect of another law specifically designed to guard against such questionable ventures as the Alaska pipeline," asked one congressional aide.

As environmentalists wade into their renewed fight against TAPS, there is a feeling of resentment against the Canadian government for its delay in stating a clear policy on a proposal for a Canadian pipeline. Some feel in fact that it may be too late already for a pipeline down the Mackenzie. However, that won't be the case if work on TAPS, unlikely as it seems to many observers, is ground to a complete halt by congressional and court reviews.

Even so, the environmentalists will be pressing to win their case. When the Interior committee meets later this month, they intend to show that they won't quietly accept the Washington political saw: "What big oil wants, big oil tends to get."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Low Level

In these days when practically anything goes and Canadian standards of tolerance have just about hit bottom, it is refreshing to find a man like Judge William Ostler taking a stand against the current wave of indecent films being shown in Victoria theatres. The majority of the advertisements for films being show in Victoria show a black cat, the symbol used to show that the film is not fit for decent people.

Judge Ostler finds that the Swedish film "Wild Honey" is obscene entertainment. It's rather frightening then to find three reputable citizens in favor of the film. That Raymond McDonald should defend its showing is only to be expected, since he passed it in the first place. It would be interesting to the public to know on what grounds psychiatrist Charles Gregory defends the film. But it is particularly disturbing to find Rev. Walter Donald, a school trustee and minister of the gospel, defending a film which Judge Ostler describes as "a succession of scenes of carnal excess which ran the whole gamut of sexual activity and deviation, reaching its climax in a saturnalia of unrelieved depravity."

How can Rev. Walter Donald face his congregation on Sunday and attempt to lead them in the paths of righteousness, but during the week advocate seeing a film which ends in "a particularly repulsive scene which brings the film to a merciful conclusion."

Judge Ostler concedes that Canadian standards of tolerance are changing rapidly but concludes, "I am not prepared to acknowledge that they have sunk so low as to be consonant with this sort of indecency."

Apparently McDonald, Gregory and Donald are of the opinion that not only have Canadian standards of tolerance sunk to a new low, but that they have hit bottom.—Maurice Rookwood, 2464 Plumer.

Cough, Cough

I would like to thank Dr. Pat McGeer for his recent stand against smoking in public places.

Smokers are welcome to poison themselves if they like, but why should the rest of us be forced to inhale their poisons too? For those of us who are sensitive to tobacco smoke it's no joke to arrive at the end of a ferry or bus journey with eyes burning, throat sore, and clothes and hair smelling like an old ashtray.

I hope the Minister of Health will act on Dr. McGeer's suggestions.— Grace Turner, 3537 Richmond Rd.

Depressing

The press picture of the University maintenance workers clearing away manure which had been dumped outside office doors in the geography department depressed me no end. It depressed me to think that this could be the product of fertile university students' minds (no pun intended) and that a major daily newspaper should find it worthy of front-page treatment. This is truly the "happy hooker age" we are living in — the greatest rewards, fame and idolatry go to those with the lowest standards in style or wit.

In case anyone gets the impression from your picture and caption that this was a cute little prank let me assure them that it was not regarded in this light by the people who were on the receiving end, namely those secretaries, maintenance crews, etc. who work at the university.

As one of the people who saw the mess of animal excrement for myself and read the accompanying "signs," full of four-letter words and lavatory humor, I can see now why people hold such views of university students as the farmer who recently described them as "bored (and boring) rich kids of rich parents."

These are the same boors who will make loud noises about oil pollution, seal hunting, wildlife protection, environmental control and social injustices, whilst trampling all over the campus skylark nesting grounds, leaving their dogs to terrorize the survivors. When Victoria is no longer a home for these unique birds who will do all the shouting?

Of course, the majority of students at the University of Victoria are striving hard to achieve standards of excellence but even those of high calibre are destined for anonymity in a society which will sing the praise of the rip-off artists and the second class. — "Not Amused."

Dog Owners

I am deeply perturbed about the plight of the sheep owners in the Langford-Metchosin area, but what about the dog owners? I do not feel that the conscientious dog owners are getting a fair break.

The owner of a female dog who has had it spayed and immunized has paid an astronomical veterinarian bill and will not allow the dog to roam. I feel that a licence concession should be given owners of spayed female dogs.

I understand that the owners of unspayed female dogs under eight pounds pay only a $2 licence fee, whereas the owner of a spayed cocker spaniel must pay $5. The licence fee for an immunized spayed female dog should only be one or two dollars.

The spaying of a female dog costs $30 to $50. The two distemper immunizations cost a total of $15. The rabies immunization (which is for people protection) costs another $7.50. It is getting so parents cannot afford to let their children have a dog as a pet, or keep a watchdog.

There should be government-sponsored clinics to provide rabies immunizations for dogs and cats every two years. Rabies immunizations should be compulsory for dogs and encouraged for cats. In the state of Washington the clinics are held in the shopping plazas. The fee is $2 per animal compared to $7.50 here. This should be instigated as a public health measure.—Animal Lover.

Falcons

Recently the Victoria Times has published news items and columns relative to the harvesting of peregrine falcons for recreational use in the sport of falconry. As a falconer and a student of resource management at UVic, I am asking for the opportunity to add my opinion to the existing confusion.

On March 31, 1973, Mr. Harold Hosford discussed the question in his column on resource use. Relative to the resolution by the Federation of B.C. Naturalists and the subsequent ban on the harvesting of peregrines by the Minister of Recreation and Conservation, Bob Williams, Mr. Hosford asks the question "Is not simply looking and enjoying a legitimate use?" The answer is — yes, of course it is. No one has ever denied this. The implication in Mr. Hosford's question is that falconry and birdwatching are incompatible. This is nonsense. No falconer would deny the right of a birdwatcher to watch wild falcons. It appears however that the Federation of B.C. Naturalists would deny the right of falconers to possess falcons. This attitude is akin to that of religious fanatics who claim they have the only true answer.

Few falconers would refuse to fly their falcon before interested persons if the request was politely made. In fact the trained falcon is enjoyed by far more people during its lifetime than the one in the wild which is infrequently seen due to its remote habitat.

The stated reason behind much of the opposition to falconry is the alleged rarity of the peregrine. To the best of my knowledge no responsible person has ever suggested that the Peales peregrine, the sub species which inhabits the B.C. coast, is in any way endangered. (See the Times article by Dr. Bristol Foster, Page 5, March 31).

I challenge anyone to present sound evidence that the limited number of permits (maximum 10 per year), for the capture of Peales falcons, allowed under Fish and Wildlife Branch regulations, constitutes a threat to the survival of the wild population. In my opinion the decision by the minister is strictly political and represents a departure from rational resource management planning and a rejection of the principle of sustained yield for renewable resources. — Neil S. Trenholme, 2180 Newton St.

Chicks

I read in your Saturday issue about the embalming of chicks by a Montreal firm to be sold as Easter gifts. This is one of the most nauseating and gruesom practices that I have ever heard of. Our world must be worse off than many think to have to resort to giving dead chickens to children as Easter gifts. Besides the fact that these chicks may contain salmonella, it is illogical to slaughter them when, given a few months, they could be feeding hungry people who may not be able to afford beef or pork.

Most people are against the shooting of wolves from helicopters and the clubbing of baby seals. Can these same people then condone the merciless massacre of thousands and thousands of baby chicks one day after birth, to be painted pastel colors or left in their original shade, and then sold as Easter presents for an innocent child? Can't anyone imagine the horror and shame that this child will feel when he finally realizes that the fuzzy toy he has been playing with was once a living, breathing, chirping, adorable baby chick — an alive thing that could move and perhaps even feel love and happiness? It is entirely possible that this child might feel hatred towards his parents, guilt because of the nightmare that this intricate creature was dead because of him, and then dread that he had been playing all along with something very dead.

With the risks involved, and the shortage of food, can it really be worth it? For $6.50 a pair? — Carl M. Jones.

60 YEARS AGO

From The Times of April 9, 1913:

San Francisco — Eight hundred pounds of white crystals, contained in four trunks, seized last night in a hotel and supposed to be cocaine, proved under analysis today to be crystalized sugar cane. Thus dissolves contraband cache, and the $50,000 seizure and other things pleasing to an ambitious detective, which the police were happy last night they had ferreted out. What they do appear to have stumbled on is quite the rawest swindle in many years. All the sugar was put up in druggist bottles, bearing the name of a Montreal manufacturer chemist, and labelled "cocaine hydro chloride, large crystals, highest purity." The owner evidently planned to impose on the craving of drug fiends. Edward Arlington, under arrest, denies that he is the owner.

'Others Need Money More Than Pensioners'

By PETER DESBARATS

This month the old folks of Canada will begin to receive the highest pension cheques in the world.

No one has referred to this yet as a senior citizens' rip-off, but it comes very close to that.

The inequities of our entire social assistance system are glaring enough to raise serious questions about the pension increase approved by Parliament last week. Regrettably, few of these questions were raised as the politicians fell over one another in a mad scramble to purchase the votes of this clearly defined bloc of 1,800,000 citizens who are over 64 years of age.

The fact that they were aggravating the injustices of the present system, and perhaps making it more difficult to correct, seemed to occur to few of the politicians. The smaller the party, the more extreme were its demands for universal old age pensions of $150 and even $200 a month.

Almost no thought was devoted to the moral issues involved in giving even more money to senior citizens while large groups or handicapped and helpless people continue to exist in extreme poverty. Pensioners' organizations continued to reinforce the erroneous notion that society is treating them shabbily while lavishing millions of dollars on the idle poor and the shiftless young.

This led to such absurdities in the pension debate last week as the suggestion by Roch Lasalle, the independent MP for Joliette, that the pension should be paid at 60 years of age to create "thousands of job opportunities for the young unemployed whom we are spoiling rotten by way of an ever-increasing number of social measures."

In reality, increases in the old age pension in recent years make such programs as Local Initiatives and Opportunities For Youth seem almost insignificant.

Since 1966, the total amount set aside by the federal government for old age security has increased from $1 billion to $2.9 billion — an increase of almost 300 per cent in less than seven years.

In the past year, the increase in the minimum basic pension received by all pensioners was more than 20 per cent, considerably better than the actual increase in the cost of living or the pay increases gained by even the strongest unions.

The minimum basic pension of $100 being paid this month, which can go up to $170 for a single person and $325 a month for a couple when there is no other source of income, is higher than the minimum old age benefits now paid in the United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Sweden. In many of these countries today, food prices are higher than in Canada.

The only Canadians on social assistance who have managed to keep pace with old age pensioners are war veterans, another politically identifiable group of 250,000 adults and dependents, whose allowances have increased 32 per cent in the past two years.

The pension increases have created unjustifiable gaps between the incomes of senior citizens and the incomes of younger persons on provincial social assistance.

In British Columbia, for instance, a couple on social assistance now is paid a total of $169 a month compared with more than $400 if they happen to be 65 years of age or over. In Quebec, the comparable monthly income for a couple on social assistance is only $158 compared with the $325 available to couples who qualify for the old age pension.

During the pension debate last week, the Social Credit MP for Portneuf, Roland Godin, described a letter he had received recently from a couple in their early 60s. Because they owned a small house, their social assistance from Quebec had been set at $119 a month. The budget that the housewife enclosed in her letter to Godin showed that they were able to spend only $35 a month for food.

In terms of numbers, the 1.4 million people who are on social assistance in Canada almost equal the 1.8 million who receive old age pensions. But their relative political influence is negligible because their demands are aimed at 10 provincial governments and because they are divided into various groups — 150,000 single mothers with 330,000 dependents, 200,000 invalids age between 18 and 65, and so on.

During the pension debate, Health and Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde was one of the few MPs who addressed himself to this problem in the face of considerable pressure from senior citizens' organizations. Although he did acknowledge this pressure by introducing the biggest pension increase in history, he at least raised questions about the wisdom of his own policy.

Responding to requests to lower the pension to 60, Lalonde asked: "Of all the groups of Canadians in need of aid, why should those who are between 60 and 65 years of age receive priority above all others?

"At first glance," he continued, "it would seem to me that mothers who have sole responsibility for raising their children are as much entitled to draw on public funds as 360,000 persons in the 60-to-65 age group who are working and earning an income."

This, of course, is one of the basic assumptions of the full-scale social assistance review that Lalonde was discussing last week with provincial welfare ministers across the country.

It would be a refreshing change if the old age pensioners, instead of demanding higher benefits for themselves, were to direct their considerable political influence at this stage to reducing the inequities that have been created between themselves and needy Canadians who have yet to reach the magic age of 65.

The Developer Who Penalizes the People

By ARNOLD TOYNBEE
London Observer

Collective penalization is one of the traditional devices that have been employed by governments for imposing their will.

A government defied by raiders from beyond its frontiers or by insurgents inside them, would send a punitive expedition, burn down a whole village and perhaps massacre the old men, women and children, in lieu of the elusive, able-bodied enemy combatants.

If a taxpayer failed to meet demands, a government would compel all the taxpayers in a district to make good the defaulter's quota, besides being still compelled each to pay his own quota in full.

Governments that have abandoned the practice of collective penalization in these spheres are fond of denouncing the practice itself as being barbarously unjust. Yet these self-righteous modern governments bomb enemy countries massively in wartime; and bombing is collective penalization raised to the n'th power by the advance of technology.

A man, armed with sword, spear or gun can select his human target; a man dropping a bomb from an aircraft or parking a car with a time-bomb inside it is using a weapon that is bound to deal death and devastation indiscriminately—especially if he is doing his bombing in a built-up, thickly inhabited area — for instance, Guernica, Coventry, Dresden, Hanoi, Belfast, Haiphong, Dublin or London (in 1940-45 and now in 1973).

This catalogue of bombed cities brings out a novel aggravation of the practice of collective penalization. In the past, this atrocious practice has been monopolized by governments, and, so far, all bombs dropped from the air have been dropped by uniformed members of the armed forces of some government or other.

But the time-bombs that have been causing death and injury in Belfast and London for examples, are instruments of a new form of inhuman activity: collective penalization by private enterprise. In Belfast and other towns in Northern Ireland civillians and policemen and soldiers who have not taken the offensive are sniped at and murdered by gunmen.

Diplomats are kidnapped and are sometimes then killed in cold blood in order to put pressure on both a host government and the government that the kidnapped diplomats represent.

There are probably few Palestinians who approve of the crime committed by Palestinian terrorists in Khartoum last month, though the Palestinian people have suffered grievous wrongs to which most of the rest of the world has been cynically indifferent.

But now we come to cases in which we can be less confident that the world's judgment will be unanimously condemnatory.

In the cases so far cited, the inhuman act, whether the agent has been a government or a private gang, has been performed with some political objective, not for private profit. But what about a speculative "developer" who buys up a section of a city, puts a number of shopkeepers out of business, and deprives the local residents of an indispensable shopping centre?

What if he then puts up new buildings and charges rents that former occupants of this section cannot afford to pay? Is not the "developer" also penalizing the whole of society in order to make profits for himself by activities that inflict social losses without producing any social gains?

This man, too, is penalizing his fellow human beings collectively. He is not taking life, but he is ruining many people's lives, and unlike both the gunmen and the memers of a government's air force, the developer is tormenting his fellow human beings for his personal economic gain. His inhumanity is more sordid than the killer's who kills in some political cause, however misguided morally the killer, too, may be.

Yet the "developer's" form of collective penalization will perhaps be positively defended, and this even ex-officio by a whole political party as a legitimate exercise of the sacred right of free economic enterprise. In the name of the self-same right, a different political party may defend strikers who deprive the public of an indispensable service in order to put pressure on a government or on a private employer to raise the strikers' wages at the cost of impoverishing the community as a whole by giving an impetus to inflation.

In principle, the same strategy is being pursued by the bomb-dropping government, by the bomb-laying terrorist, by the shop-closing "developer" and by the public-service-withholding striker.

Each of them is practising collective penalization in order to achieve his own purpose, whether his purpose is public and political or whether it is private and economic. He is tormenting fellow human beings who have done him no wrong and against whom he had no direct grievance, and he is doing this in order to exert pressure against someone else.

He is trying to bring some government to its knees, or to extort for himself, at his compatriots' expense, a larger share of his nation's income.

This strategy is like that of an army that kidnaps at random a sufficient number of "enemy" women and children for forming a screen behind which this dastardly army can advance.

If we do not put an end to this atrocity — namely the collective penalization of innocent and powerless human beings — we shall be branding our generation as infamous.

Fortunately this behavior, in all its forms, is being condemned today audibly by at least a section of the public. Is the tide of feeling rising to a level at which it will be able to sweep away malpractices of this kind? This is a question on which mankind's future hangs, and we cannot yet foretell what mankind's answer is going to be.

However there are already signs that collective penalization is beginning to prove to be counter-productive. Mankind's counter-strategy surely must be to make the offence so manifestly counter-productive that even the most fanatical addicts to collective penalization will give it up as a bad job or, better still, will give it up because they have found that they have themselves come to be ashamed of what they are doing.

I believe that collective penalization of any kind is going to turn out to be counter productive. But if my optimism is to be justified by the outcome of our present moral crisis mankind must make it manifest that collective penalization is not going to be allowed to pay dividends.

The only effective way of demonstrating this is to resist pressure manfully, whatever the degree of the pressure may be.

We must not let ourselves be coerced by bombs. We must not be induced to surrender by being deprived of our gas or our trains. If we find that we are being used as a living shield we must accept casualties without hoisting the white flag.

Knocking Down a Tax Myth

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Who pays for most government programs?

Who benefits from them?

A current belief has it that the sturdy, middle and upper-income Canadians pay most of the shot. They shudder under the tax burdens while the lower-income groups, the unemployed, the undereducated, youth, and the improvident elederly, benefit from the programs.

You've heard about the white-collar backlash. It was, it is said, operating in the last federal campaign.

As an example, this so-called backlash from the suffering middle classes has agitated a colleague of mine in the press gallery. In the past few years his resentment has smouldered over burgeoning programs and heavy taxation. His outrage that the frugal, the provident, the people dedicated to education, to self-improvement, and to hard work — (law-abiding to boot) —should bear the increasing load emerged in commentary and loaded questions to politicians.

★ ★ ★

The politicians, even the left-wingers who cannot accept the theme holus-bolus, have usually reacted defensively. Bryce Mackasay has been an exception. They have rarely challenged this broad interpretation about those who must give and give and those who only take.

Of course, the commentator, like most of us straining for the media around politics, is of this worthy but burdened segment of the people who make between $10,000 and $20,000 a year.

A few weeks ago the Economic Council published a rather difficult text which I have touted to my colleague. Let me tout it to you. It kicks holes in the belief that there is an onerous tax load on the middle-middle and middle-upper classes. Surprisingly, the text has not been widely publicized, not even by the politicians whose interest it would be.

The author is an economist, one Allan M. Maslove. The title is "The Pattern of Taxation in Canada."

Each of us wears three hats as taxpayer — a federal, provincial and a municipal one. Maslove examines taxes levied by all three levels of government. His purpose is to find: "Who pays for the various government activities?" "... who, in the final analysis, actually pays (bears the burden of) the tax."

"Virtually all taxes," says Maslove "have the potential to affect the relative economic positions of an individual family in two ways — by affecting the income received (the income-sources side) or altering the relative prices of the goods bought (the income-uses side)."

"The net effect of these two adjustments," according to Maslove, "is to change the real income position of the individual as compared to his pre-tax position and relative to other members of the community."

The study analyses the incidences of taxes in Canada by province and, within provinces, by income groups. The grist of it is in many series of tables. There's an emphasis on ascertaining family money income and broad income distribution in Canada.

Maslove uses a familiar trio of categories for taxes: "A tax is 'progressive' if the effective average tax rate (taxes paid as a fraction of total income) increases as income rises."

"A tax is 'regressive' if the effective tax rate falls as income rises — it is 'proportional' if the rate remains constant as income changes."

Maslove's conclusions are not indefinite or wishy-washy. Here they are.

"By far the most striking conclusion to be drawn from an examination of total tax payments is the extreme regressivity of the system at the lower end of the income scale and the lack of any significant progressivity over the remainder of the income range."

"The implication is that, while government expenditure programs may contribute to the redistribution of income, the tax system as a whole does nothing to contribute to this goal."

Maslove repeats himself in his summary — "the extremely regressive nature of the tax system at the low end of the income scale and the lack of progressivity over the remainder."

He emphasizes that a substantial proportion of Canadian family units are at the lower end of the income scale and thus the victims of the regressive tax system. From 22 to 39 per cent, depending on the province, of all family units, are in this lower range, having $6,000 or less a year in income.

★ ★ ★

The study shows that municipal taxes are the most regressive of the three while federal taxes are the most progressive. Of course, the municipalities find it almost impossible to levy taxes that are directly related to income.

Who pays for government programs?

All of us who pay taxes. Most of us do. Which group bears proportionately the heavier burden of taxation? The lower income families.

Who bears the least of the load, proportionately? Those with higher incomes, particularly over $12,000 a year.

At the beginning I asked: Who pays? Who benefits?

Maslove and the Economic Council convince me with this study that the answer to the first question is proven, as above stated.

The second question is only answered in an indirect way — in passing one might say — but it fits. Those who pay proportionately less and have the most after-tax income for personal disposal also get proportionately the most from the benefits and services of government programs.

If my colleague won't read Maslove, maybe Messrs. Turner, Stanfield, and Lewis will.

COWARD

"Say something amusing," an unwise lady once demanded of Noel Coward at a Melbourne reception. "Australia," he kindly replied. "Noel Coward?" said Lady Diana Cooper. "You wrote Private Lives — not very funny." "You acted Saint Joan. Very funny."

I don't much care whether these stories are true or not. They add incomparably to the gaiety of nations; they have become language rather than literature, like "Very flat, Norfolk," or the observation that bad sherry tastes like brown paper.

A former political correspondent of the New Statesman used regularly to rush into my office, shield his eyes with a horizontal hand, and burst into the first verse of Has Anybody Seen Our Ship? If you can't mourn the death of such a creative force, you must have a heart of stone or brown paper.

Study Group Axes Log Practices

Governments should take over logging companies which claim they can't make enough profit from timber under proper forest management practices, a leading forest ecologist said Saturday.

"I'm not advocating the government take over private industry said Dr. Hamish Kimmins of the University of British Columbia. "But if a company can't manage the land properly and make a profit, then it should become a public utility."

Dr. Kimmins headed a group of professional foresters and conservationists who toured and examined forest practices in the Greater Victoria watershed.

Last month, in a series of public lectures sponsored by the Vancouver Island section, Canadian Institute of Forestry, he criticized some practices on public lands in British Columbia.

Dr. Kimmins observed the logging industry is controlled by international corporations with headquarters in large cities like New York who seek maximum returns from their investments.

"They are not interested in the land or what happens to the land," he told the group.

He said the Sierra Club in the United States forced several companies making maximum profits from forest lands without any regard for the environment to leave the country and operate elsewhere.

"They are now operating in the tropics," he said. "You should see the terrible damage they are causing to the land in those countries."

"I question any company which says its expenditures are too high," he added.

Kimmins said he was certain the forest industry can make a reasonable profit and manage the land properly.

"What we, the owners of the land, should do is to set out economic ground rules for them," he said. "The present economic set up is not satisfactory."

Speaking on logging practices, he pointed out that most of the erosion of forest lands in the province is caused by poorly constructed and poorly maintained logging roads.

He was asked if the setting aside of forest lands as parks is resulting in a loss of jobs.

"What is causing loss of jobs is not parks, but the rapid mechanization of the forest industry," he said. "This is being done to offset rising wages."

Kimmins said the Greater Victoria Water District is making an attempt to manage the land in its 26,000 acre watershed properly.

"The district is applying practices which should be carried out by private industry," he said.

Doug Homer-Dixon, chief forester, said logging is not carried out on high and rocky ridges where the soil is thin and light.

"There is no point in logging these trees," he said. "If you do, you lose the soil and trees won't grow there again. The trees are not renewable resources."

He admitted the water district's practice of not logging it's non-renewable resources is an exception to the rule.

"Trees on similar sites have and are still being cut in B.C.," he said.

His group saw marshes which had not been ramaged by logging. They were clean of debris.

They also saw evidence of extensive re-planting, and careful management of sites with unstable soils.

5 Die in Fire

PRESTON, Md. (AP) — A woman and four of her young children died when a fire swept their 19th-century wooden farmhouse on Maryland's eastern shore early Sunday, authorities reported. Firemen recovered the bodies of 35-year-old Nancy Messick and her children from their ruined house.

PUPILS VIEW MODELS

Development proposals for the Bapco Paint site on the Inner Harbor will be assessed by some 800 Greater Victoria high school students Thursday and Friday.

Four models of the $10 million hotel-apartment complex will be in the auditorium of Mount View Senior Secondary School, where students will examine them as part of their studies in economics, geography and social studies.

The project was initiated by Stephen Murphy, a teacher at Colquitz Junior Secondary School. Three classes of his Grade 10 students are currently studying renewal of the harbor.

CIL Properties Ltd., a subsidiary of Canadian Industries Ltd. as is Bapco Paint, completed a two-day public showing of the four design alternatives for the project in January.

In the company's annual report, sales and other revenue were $15,672,080 in 1972 compared with $12,586,304 in 1971.

Ginter Halts Takeover

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ben Ginter has announced that Uncle Ben's Industries Ltd. has withdrawn a request for shareholder approval to take over all outstanding shares of Uncle Ben's Breweries (Manitoba) Ltd. and Uncle Ben's Breweries of Alberta Ltd.

He said at the annual meeting of Uncle Ben's Industries that the Alberta government was reluctant to allow any company to make any changes in the status of the Alberta operation now.

Uncle Ben's of Alberta has been given a $500,000 five-year forgiveable loan under the Alberta Industrial Incentives Act.

Ginter said acquisition of the Manitoba Brewery shares would be deferred until the Alberta deal could be concluded.

In the year ended June 30, 1972, Uncle Ben's had sales of $5.2 million and a net profit of $140,894. In the following three months, although sales were $1,575,680, there was a net loss of $3,422. The company's fiscal year-end has been changed to Sept. 30.

Rate Hike Effects Minor

TORONTO (CP, )— Financial community representatives say they expect little effect from the Bank of Canada's decision to increase its interest rate today by one-half a percentage point to 5.25 per cent.

That is the rate of interest charged by the central bank on loans to chartered banks and investment dealers.

Richard M. Thomson, president of the Toronto Dominion Bank, said the change would raise the prime interest rates of chartered banks. But he did not expect consumer lending rates would change and mortgage rates probably would remain close to the current 9¼ per cent.

Bevan G. Walker, treasurer of Beneficial Finance Co. of Canada, said the Bank of Canada move would not affect loan companies.

"But it will put a squeeze on profits. It won't stop people from borrowing."

He also said he thought the action could prove detrimental to the employment scene.

A. M. Dedman, vice-president and general manager of A. E. Le Page Ltd., a major real-estate firm, said effects of the increase are unpredictable.

"It could increase mortgage rates or they could remain stable because there are funds available."

BRICKLAYER DIES AT 157

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — A 157-year-old bricklayer, said to be Brazil's oldest known resident, died at the suburb of Nova Iguacu during the weekend.

Jose Francisco Helio da Silva, according to a birth certificate produced by his family, was born in 1816 in Portugal and came to Brazil in 1880.

Foresters Urged to Fight Environmental Critics

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The president of the Council of Forest Industries says the woods industry must begin to fight back against its environmentalist critics by explaining the tax benefits it brings British Columbians.

Gordon Draeseke of Vancouver told the annual meeting of the CFI's northern interior lumber sector the industry "must continually explain and sell its concept of land use management" to counter attacks by environmentalists.

Draeseke said the B.C. forest industry is the most heavily taxed in North America with as much as 80 per cent of gross income going to the provincial and federal governments.

"I think anyone would be hard pressed to find another jurisdiction on this continent that derives as much economic benefit for the government and the people from an industry such as ours when prices are at a peak as they are now," he said.

The CFI president acknowledged this "may not be the best time to lobby the government on matters of taxation and provincial charges such as stumpage — prices are high and profits are up." Stumpage rates are calculated on the difference between average market price of products and the average efficient operator cost.

"In the final analysis, when the margin is reasonably large — that is when prices are high as they are today — the provincial government takes 60 per cent of the conversion return as stumpage," he said.

"The remaining 40 per cent is left with the operator as his gross profit, but of course he must pay all of his taxes out of this 40 per cent.

"Between the regular income tax and the special provincial logging tax, more than 50 per cent of this remaining gross profit is taken by the provincial and federal governments as taxes.

"Consequently when the price of lumber goes up by $10, about $6 goes directly to the provincial government in stumpage, plus another 70 cents to the provincial government in income and logging taxes, and another 41 cents to the federal government."

Winnipeg Gold Hits $100

WINNIPEG (CP) — The long-predicted price of $100 an ounce for a gold futures contract was recorded today at the opening of the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

The magic figure went on the board in a transaction for April, 1974, delivery. Prices are in U.S. funds a fine ounce and a minimum contract is for 400 ounces.

When the commodity exchange opened the world's first gold futures market last Nov. 15, prices reached $66.51 on the first day.

Prices generally have been on a steady upward trend since then. There were further sharp advances last week in what traders interpret as continuing uncertainty about the world currency situation.

Record Car Sales Stress Compacts

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians are buying new cars in record numbers this year, with a continuing swing to smaller vehicles.

First-quarter figures show a growing number of new buyers turning to the compact to sub-compact models, an area where imports have held a strong foothold for years.

Henry Sahrmann, manager of corporate relations for Volkswagen Canada Ltd., says he expects more than half of the new car market in Canada will be in compact or sub-compact models by the end of the year.

"On the West Coast, almost 50 per cent of the vehicles now sold are either compact or sub-compacts."

The big three Canadian manufacturers — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — all report record sales for the first three months of the year. So do the major Japanese makers.

But the figures show that the domestic auto makers are biting into the small car market once dominated by imports and that the percentage of the market held by imports is less than it was a few years ago.

For the month of February — latest period for which figures are available from Statistics Canada — overseas cars held 21.8 per cent of the new vehicle market in Canada, down from 25.2 per cent a year ago. The 1972 average was 23.9 per cent.

AUSTIN PRICE INCREASED

TORONTO (CP) — British Leyland Motors Canada Ltd. announced prices of its cars in Canada have been increased an average 4.5 per cent.

The increase added $100 to the standard two-door Austin Marina, bringing the suggested retail price to $2,695.

John Mackie, vice-president of marketing, said the added cost resulted from the rise in the value of the British pound in relation to the Canadian dollar through recent international currency realignments.

Picasso: An Emotion Frozen Forever

petition for entry into the school

The normal time for preparing a work to submit was a month, but Picasso completed his — a male nude In in a day and was admitted to the school in 1896.

The main reason he attended, according to his long-time companion and aide, Jaime Sabartes, was that his family could not conceive of a "professional" artist without a diploma.

After a year of study in Barcelona he did additional academic work in Madrid and then spent some time recovering from an illness in the Catalan village of Horta de Ebro.

He was immensely taken by the local people and under their influence and the influence of Barcelona, which was by far Spain's most cosmopolitan city, he became a Catalan by adoption.

He returned to Barcelona and at about that time dropped the Ruiz from his name and began signing his pictures with only the less common surname, Picasso.

He also discovered Paris, to which he made three trips between 1900 and 1903.

A fourth trip, made at the end of 1903, was the final one.

He settled in the French capital among the other painters, sculptors, poets, art dealers and patrons.

It was during this time that he painted the pictures encompassed by the Blue perior, so called because of the cool blue tone that dominated virtually all of the pictures done between 1900 and 1904.

Many of his works leading up to the blue period resembled those of Toulouse-Lautrec, whom Picasso greatly admired, and occasionally those of other painters, but the Blue period paintings and graphics were clearly his own.

They were perhaps mot influenced by El Greco, especially in the elongation of figures, but they were at the same time original and emotionally compelling.

★ ★ ★

The symbolic meaning of blue has been debated by critics with some saying that it expressed despair, but Sabartes has written that "blue shows itself as an aspiration to sublimity in the midst of desperation or sadness."

The graphic masterpiece of the Blue period, and perhaps the most important work executed by Piscasso between 1900 and 1904, was the etching known as the Frugal Repast.

It is an exquisitely drawn and composed scene of a hollow-cheeked blind man, his emaciated wife, a bit of bread and a bottle of wine.

Like the best of Picasso, like the best of all art, it preserves a moment, freezes an emotion forever.

The year 1904, his first full year in Paris, marked the close of the Blue period and the beginning of the two-year Rose period, or as Alfred Barr called it the Circus period.

He painted mostly acrobats and other circus people and the dominant tones were rose.

Picasso was now living in the Bateau Lavoir a Paris tenement favored by artists, and named by the poet Max Jacob because it swayed like a Seine laundry boat, and his studio was fast becoming something of a salon.

His friends included Jacob and the poet Gullaume Apollinaire; the painters Matisse, Braque and Gris, Jean Cocteau, Jack of all artistic trades; Gertrude Stein, writer, collector of paintings, painters and writers, and her brother Leo, who also collected paintings, and a number of dealers including Betrhe Weill, Daniel-Henri Kahn-Weiler and Ambrose Vollard.

In 1905 he travelled to Holland and returned to paint pictures of very solid-looking boys and horses, in blues and greys and skin tones, that were far less classical than the work he had been producing.

It was in 1907, however, that he painted the picture that changed the direction of the plastic arts in the 20th century.

It was named, after completion, les Demoiselles d'Avignon, in honor of the ladies of the night on Avignon Street in Barcelona.

This representation of five women, with its African overtones in two of the heads, was Picasso's first Cubist painting. With that work the rules were rewritten.

Cezanne's landscapes had pointed the way, but it was Picasso who broke the barrier, who dared to relegate realistic representation to an inferior place in painting.

In 1917 he travelled to Rome with Cocteau and tried his hand at stage design. But his settings were too dramatic to be successful. They stole the show.

While in Rome he met Stravinsky and also the dancer Olga Koklova, who became his first wife.

During the 1920s he painted and drew in his so-called neo-classical style for the most part.

The figures were monumental, but the style differed from the classicial model at least as much as Renaissance painting did.

The period culminated in a series of etchings for Ovid's Metamorphosis (1931) in which the famous Picasso line, with all its expressive qualities, is given free rein.

Picasso also moved in and around the edges of surrealism at this time.

★ ★ ★

His work was included in the first surrealist group show, but even when he did surrealistic work, the surprise resulted from formal or spatial considerations rather than content or subject matter.

The distorted portraits, many of which were also painted during this period, really had little to do with surrealism. They were a product of Picasso's unique way of viewing the real world.

He separated from his first wife, Olga Koklova, the ballerina, in 1935. They had a son named Paolo.

He did not divorce Koklova because of community property laws and did not remarry until after she died 20 years later.

In 1955 he began a relationship with Jacqueline Rogue, a young woman of 29, whose face was to become famous like the faces of all the other women in Picasso's life, through the many portraits he did of her. They married in 1961.

The other woman in Picasso's life, something of an estranged wife, was Spain. Although he lived most of his life in his adopted France, which he considered the best place to live and work, even through the war years although he had the opportunity to go to the United States, he never ceased to be a Spaniard in heart and spirit.

Although apolitical, Picasso was certainly a republican (in the Spanish sense) and a democrat (in the generic sense).

In 1937 he was moved by the Spanish Civil War to take political action in the way he knew best — through his art.

He etched the "dream and lie of Franco," which showed the leader of the nationalist forces as an arch villian, who, in a series of cartoon-like panels, is ultimately turned into a centaur and gored to death by a bull.

Then, later in 1937, an event that was unprecedented in the history of warfare spurred Picasso to his most ambitious and in some respects his greatest work.

The event was the bombing of the Basque town of Guernica by German planes and pilots in the first trial run for the massive bombing of population centres during the Second World War.

The wanton bombing of Guernica provided the inspiration. In a month of intense work he produced more than 70 studies and the 25½-foot by 11½-foot oil on canvas, in shades stunned the world, both for its moral force and its esthetic daring.

The whole canvas appears to be illuminated by a large light bulb. It contains a burning house, a contorted horse on its knees pierced by a spear, a dead warrior clutching the handle of a broken sword, a half-clothed woman who seems to be crawling toward the horse, a screaming woman leaning out of a window, another woman with a frightfully deformed head and outstretched arms, an aggressive-looking bull, a woman with a dead child in her arms, a table and a bird with a stretched neck and open beak.

In his later years Picasso produced numerous variations on themes by other artists. He also did a series of erotic etchings that some critics found demeaning, but that had all the wit and skill of execution of much of his best work.

He never seemed to tire, he never stopped working and he was to art in the 20th century as Einstein was to physical science and Freud to psychology — the single most inventive and creative force.

Bitter Drivers to Protest ...If Lemons Make It

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-six unhappy owners of Firenza cars decided Sunday night to form a cavalcade to General Motors of Canada Ltd. in Oshawa.

Terming the cars $3,000 "disasters," the group will drive the 35 miles Thursday to demand reimbursements of the purchase price from GM headquarters.

"It's going to be tough to get our money," said Bob Moore, newly-elected chairman of the group, sponsored by the Automobile Protection Association.

Complaints about the car, aired at the second meeting of Firenza owners, ranged from faulty transmissions to the trim dropping off without reason.

GM has stopped selling the import after complaints about its reliability mounted.

Helen Naken said her Firenza broke down so often that she was given another one last June but "I couldn't get it off the lot" and it had to be fixed.

"After 3,700 miles the transmission on the second one is slipping. I'm leaking oil and the door is stuck. I have trouble getting in and out."

Several people at the meeting said the cars couldn't make it to Oshawa.

"Tie them all together then we can pull each other," was one owner's suggestion.

In Oshawa, a GM spokesman said the company is aware there are complaints about the car, but owners have been instructed to "seek redress in their own area."

The spokesman said the car owners were asked to make contact with the company's zone offices with their problems.

He said he doesn't know what kind of reception the car owners will receive if they arrive in Oshawa.

Sweet Gift Not to Taste Of Dockers

TALCAHUANO, Chile (UPI) — Longshoremen protesting "voluntary labor" refused Monday to unload 11,000 tons of sugar donated by the Cuban government unless they are paid for their work.

Ignacio Perez, leader of the Longshoremen's Union, said the stevedores "are faithful followers of the old adage that says 'he who does not work, does not eat.' Therefore we will not work for nothing."

The shipment was the first instalment on a 40,000-ton donation offered by Cuban Premier Fidel Castro when Socialist President Salvador Allende visited Havana last December.

CRISIS ON THE CRISIS LINE

NEED, the 24-hour telephone service for people in distress, is short of people to man its phones, said co-ordinator David Stewart.

"We're not surprised we lose quite a few of our volunteers when the university term gets to the examination stage," he said.

"At this point, though, the volume of calls is way up and not enough new people are coming through the training program to meet the need."

Volunteers range in age from 18 to 64, about one-third of whom are University of Victoria or Camosun College students. Four-hour daytime shifts are handled free, but anyone manning the phone from 10 p.m. onward gets a stipend of $5.

NEED screens and trains all applicants and in-service training is given. Next screening session for interested volunteers will be May 7 at 4 p.m. in room 420 of the MacLaurin Building on the UVic campus.

Since the NEED line opened two years ago, it has received more than 16,500 anonyous calls concerning drug problems, marital disputes, loneliness and other problems. The current average is 45 calls a day.

GERMAN CRUISER OFF VICTORIA

West Germany's largest naval vessel, the 4,850-ton light cruiser Deutschland, will be off the Victoria waterfront 4 a.m. Thursday, en route to Vancouver.

She is 435 feet long, was built in 1960, has a speed of 22 knots and carries a crew of 432 officers and men, including 103 navy cadets.

She will fire a 21-gun salute as she passes Brockton Point on the mainland about 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

The salute will be returned by the 15th Field Artillery Regiment, Royal Canadian Artillery.

Aboard the Deutschland will be 40 new cadets taken on at San Francisco.

The German training ship will berth at pier C at the foot of Granville and will be open to the public 2 to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

She is commanded by Capt. Karl Welz.

During her stay in Vancouver her crew will lay wreaths at the Cenotaph at 10:30 a.m. on Friday, donate blood at the Red Cross donor clinic at 9 a.m. that day and also hold a reception and party on board for underprivileged children at 3 p.m.

West Germany's ambassador to Canada, Dr. R. Von Keller will fly from Ottawa to attend the ship's various functions.

Rising Cost Of Housing U.K. Target

LONDON (AP) — The British government published plans today for steadying soaring housing prices.

The government policy document stressed moves to make more land available for the building of new homes.

One key change is aimed at land speculators who buy up property and then hold it off the house market, thus helping to boost prices.

The government said that in future housing developments should be completed within four years. After that they will be taxed at 30 per cent of their market value a year until they are finished. At present there is no such tax.

Other moves are designed to release more government-held land for house building and to improve the supply of funds for mortgages.

Coaches' Feud Spices Series

BUFFALO, N.Y. (CP) — One fact became clear today as Buffalo Sabres and Montreal Canadiens prepared for the fifth game of their best-of-seven Stanley Cup playoff series in Montreal Tuesday.

That fact was that feelings between rival coaches Joe Crozier of Buffalo and Scotty Bowman of Montreal probably could run higher than those of some of the opposing players before their quarter-final series ends.

The Sabres earned the right to a fifth game when they defeated the favored Canadiens 5-1 Sunday for their first-ever playoff victory before an enthusiastic capacity crowd of 15,668.

In addition to Perreault with two goals and one assist and Robert with one goal and an assist, little Roger Crozier performed with flair and agility in the Buffalo nets, turning aside all but one of 24 Montreal drives.

The only shot to elude Crozier was Yvan Cournoyer's fifth goal of the series.

The Sabres thus recovered from a 5-2 defeat in the fourth game here Saturday night. Montreal scorers in that one were Guy Lafleur, Peter Mahovlich, Frank Mahovlich, rookie Murray Wilson and veteran centre Henri Richard with an empty-net goal.

Coach Crozier praised his big line and defended the fact the French Connection had not been used a great deal in Saturday night's loss.

"I knew I had a fresher line than they (Canadiens) had and I played them extra all night," Crozier said of the Sunday game.

Crozier had been criticized locally and questioned as to why he saw fit not to use the big line more in Saturday's game.

Apparently he had gone into that contest intent on matching lines with Bowman. The two have been at loggerheads since the series started with their frequent switches of personnel and aggravating each other with these delays.

Crozier and Bowman exchanged words as the two teams left the ice Sunday night and in his office, jammed by newspaper men, Crozier made it clear there was little love lost between the two.

"I didn't run around and complain to (referee-in-chief) Scotty Morrison," Crozier said, referring to an incident in the second game won by the Montreal club 7-3.

"I have no love for Mr. Bowman whatsoever," Crozier said.

Bowman was not available for rebuttal as he and the Canadiens caught an immediate charter flight back to Montreal.

Blues Avoid Elimination; Stars Blanked

By The Canadian Press

St. Louis Blues still have a long way to go, but they remained alive in the western division Stanley Cup playoffs Sunday by defeating Chicago Black Hawks 5-3, while Philadelphia Flyers shut out Minnesota North Stars 3-0.

The Blues stil ltrail the best-of-seven quarter-finals 3-1, but the Flyers-North Stars series is knotted at 2-2, with the fifth games scheduled for Chicago and Philadelphia on Tuesday.

The Blues had to rally from a 2-0 deficit to conquer the Black Hawks and stave off elemination. Phil Roberto's unassisted goal ignited the second-period rally that started St. Louis to victory.

Roberto, leader of the Blues' quarter-final victory over Minnesota in 1972, lighted the fuse after Pierre Plante had sliced Chicago's lead to 2-1 in the first period.

Hawks' defenceman Bill White attempted a pass out of his own end of the rink, but Roberto intercepted the puck and took one stride before firing it past Gary Smith's left shoulder.

Less than two minutes later, after Phil Russell blocked Garry Unger's shot, Unger passed to Fran Huck who scored from close range to establish a 3-2 St. Louis lead.

Roberto then set up Gary Sabourin whose rising shot beat Smith to cap the rally.

Chicago applied the pressure and closed to 4-3 on Chico Maki's goal late in the third period.

Favell Enjoying Superb Series

Chicago, outskated and outshot the Blues in a 5-2 victory Saturday night.

Bobby Clarke's first career Stanley Cup goal and brilliant work in goal by Doug Favell featured the Flyers' triumph in a game that wasn't as rambunctious as the first three games of the series. Clarke failed to record either a goal or an assist in four playoff contests last year.

Clarke's goal broke a two-game shutout streak by Minnesota's Cesare Maniago as the North Stars had won Saturday's game 5-0. Bill Barber and Ross Lonsberry added insurance goals in the final six minutes and Favell turned aside 31 North Star shots.

"So far, this is the greatest series I've ever played," said Favell, who has allowed only five goals in four games. "Before, my record was pretty terrible."

The sixth game of the series will be played in Minnesota Thursday night.

TEAMWORK was hardly of major league calibre on this play during first game of National League baseball doubleheader Sunday in Atlanta. Racing for fly ball, outfielder Hank Aaron of Braves collides with second-baseman Dave Johnson (6). Aaron made catch despite collision, but Braves dropped 10-3 decision to Houston Astros before coming back for 10-inning, 4-3 victory in nightcap. (AP Wirephoto)

Pirates Turn On Power For Sweep Over Cards

By The Associated Press

Pittsburgh Pirates used longball power to come from behind in both games and sweep a National League doubleheader from St. Louis Cardinals 4-3 and 5-3 in Sunday's baseball action.

Losing 3-2 going into the ninth inning of the first game the defending East-Division champions sent the opener into overtime on Manny Sanguillen's sacrifice fly and then won it in the 10th on Bob Robertson's home run.

In the nightcap of the doubleheader at Three Rivers Stadium, the Pirates smashed three homers — including blasts by Milt May and Gene Alley in a three-run fifth that wiped out a 2-1 Redbird lead.

In Sunday's other NL games, Cincinnati Reds tripped San Francisco Giants 3-1; Montreal Expos defeated Chicago Cubs 5-2; Houston Astros took a 10-3 opening-game victory from Atlanta Braves before losing the nightcap 4-3 in 10 innings and Los Angeles Dodgers stopped San Diego Padres 4-0.

In the American League, Boston Red Sox nudged New York Yankees 4-3 in 10 innings; Detroit Tigers blanked Cleveland Indians 4-0; Minnesota Twins defeated Oaland Athletics 4-2 and Kansas City Royals edged California Angels 6-5.

Cincinnati's Ross Grimsley continued his career mastery over San Francisco, beating the Giants with last-out relief help from Pedro Borbon. Grimsley, who hasn't lost to the Giants in five decisions, got his winning runs in the first inning on Tony Perez' sacrifice fly and Cesar Geronimo's single.

Pepe Mangual drove in three runs with his first major league homer to lead Montreal over Chicago. Mangual tagged a two-run homer in the first inning and then singled home another tally in the second.

Houston beat Atlanta in the first game as Cesar Cedeno clubbed a two-run homer and added a pair of doubles in an eight-run sixth. The Braves won the nightcap as Mike Lum tied it in the ninth with a two-run homer and won it in the 10th with an RBI single.

Reliever George Culver choked off a bases-loaded threat in the eighth inning and Joe Ferguson slammed a two-run double as Los Angeles beat San Diego.

Designated hitter Orlando Cepeda led off the ninth with a homer to lead Boston over New York in the American League.

Bullets Vanish From Playoffs

By The Associated Press

Earl Monroe performs magic on the court; Jerry Lucas is a professional magician off it.

Sunday in New York's Madison Square Garden, Monroe and Lucas joined their Knick teammates to do something magical: They made Baltimore Bullets disappear.

By virtue of the Knicks 109-99 victory, Baltimore was not only eliminated from the National Basketball Association playoffs in five games, but also from the NBA. Next season the franchise will move to Largo, Md., a suburb of Washington, D.C.

In Sunday's other NBA action, Chicago topped Los Angeles Lakers 98-94 while Atlanta Hawks defeated Boston Celtics 97-94. All the active NBA playoffs, including Golden State and Milwaukee which resumes play Tuesday night in Madison, Wis., are now deadlocked at two games apiece.

In the ABA on Sunday, Utah defeated San Diego 120-99 to erase the Conquistadors 4-0 in their best-of-seven series.

On Saturday in the NBA, Golden State knocked off Milwaukee Bucks 102-97, while over in the ABA Saturday, Virginia and Denver were both eliminated in five games. Kentucky beat Virginia 114-103 while Indiana defeated Denver 121-107. Elsewhere, Utah nipped San Diego 97-96.

Baltimore's weaknesses on defence and on the bench caused the Bullets' downfall. A despondent Coach Gene Shue said: "You just can't beat the Knicks without good defence. Normally in the playoffs, the defence gets better but ours got weaker instead of stronger."

Priester Back

Priester, six-one and 195 pounds from Boston University, joined Calgary for the last nine games of the 1972 season and played regularly.

Non-Giving Bruins Receive a Warning

NEW YORK (CP) — Three or four Bruins may be drawing their paycheques elsewhere next year unless they've good reason to be turning in sub-par performances.

Coach Bep Guidolin was perplexed Sunday night after his Boston Bruins were blanked 4-0 by New York to give the Rangers a 3-1 stranglehold on their National Hockey League quarter-final.

The best-of-seven series resumes Tuesday night at Boston, and there's every reason to believe that three or four unidentified players will be wearing the black, white and gold of the defending Stanley Cup champions for the last time.

"You don't have to ask who they are," Guidolin said outside the hushed Bruin dressing room. "You can see for yourself who they are, even when we win."

There are a few players on the team, Guidolin said, "not giving as much as they should."

"When the season is over, we're gonna take a long look. These guys have the talent, so I don't know why they're not playing as well as they should."

A combination of good fortune by the Rangers and bad bounces for Boston all but nailed the coffin shut, as Guidolin described the Bruins' position after losing the first two games of the series at home.

"Tonight they brought out the sharp spikes," he said Sunday, giving added stimulus to the feeling that the Boston club has faded as a contender.

Rod Gilbert and Pete Stemkowski moved the New Yorkers in front 2-0 in the first period and with veteran Ed Giacomin jamming the goalmouth shut on an assortment of Boston rushes, second-period scores by Bobby Rousseau and Steve Vickers were just so much additional padding.

The Sunday contest was a contrast in style to New York's 4-2 loss here in the third game Saturday night when Boston rookie Greg Sheppard took advantage of mental lapses to score twice.

Johnston couldn't be faulted on any of the Ranger goals Sunday night. New York, with hustle and muscle to spare, hardly showed the wear of playing their fourth game in five nights.

The Bruins played without centre Phil Esposito, operated on in Boston Saturday to repair a torn medial collateral ligament in his right knee suffered Thursday when checked by Ranger defenceman Ron Harris.

The Rangers, too, were ailing. Captain Vic Hadfield suffered dizzy spells during the warmup and did not play. Defenceman Dale Rolfe also sat out the game after injuring his left hand Saturday.

Hadfield, who suffered a concussion late in the season, was involved in a fight with the Bruins' Derek Sanderson Saturday night and the hard-nosed Boston centre landed several shots to the New York winger's head.

ESPO FACES LONG REST

BOSTON (AP) — Phil Esposito, the Boston Bruins' all-star centre who has led the national Hockey League in scoring in four of the last five years, was resting comfortably today after undergoing knee surgery.

Esposito, injured in the Bruins' second game of a playoff with New York Rangers, was operated upon Saturday for repair of torn cartilage in his right knee.

BLADES' POWER PLAY DROPS BOMBERS AGAIN

SASKATOON — Saskatoon Blades scored four of their first five goals on power-play situations, including a pair by defenceman Pat Price, and carried on Sunday for a 6-1 Western Canada Junior Hockey League playoff victory over Flin Flon Bombers.

Saskatoon, which had won the first game by an identical 6-1 score, thus holds a 2-0 lead as the best-of-seven Eastern Division final shifts to Flin Flon. Games three and four will be played next Friday and Sunday.

Bill Laing also scored twice for Blades while Dennis Abgrall and Byron Jackson added one apiece, but it was Saskatoon's defence that fashioned the victory before 3,932 fans. Blades' strong, two-way game restricted Flin Flon to 24 shots and one goal by Dale Iannone after Saskatooon had taken a 5-0 lead.

Jets Pumping On 'All Lines'

WINNIPEG (CP) — All season long Winnipeg Jets were known mainly as a one-line hockey club. Take away the Bobby Hull-Norm Beaudin Chris Bordeleau unit and the jets would be just another club instead of running away with the World Hockey Association's western division championship, people said.

But Sunday night, before 8,425 fans, the other lines came to life and sparked the Jets to a 5-2 victory over Minnesota Fighting Saints.

The win gave Winnipeg a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven quarter-final with the series now shifting to St. Paul for games Tuesday and Wednesday.

In the other western division series, Los Angeles Sharks beat Houston Aeros 4-2 Saturday in Houston to tie their series at 1-1.

New England Whalers and Cleveland Crusaders have taken charge in the Eastern Division. The Whalers followed up Saturday's 6-3 victory over Ottawa Nationals with a 4-3 overtime verdict Sunday while the Crusaders downed Philadelphia Blazers 7-1 and 3-1.

In Winnipeg, playing-coach Hull praised his other lines saying they have put their minds to the task at hand.

While Hull, Bordeleau and Beaudin each scored one goal, so did Johnson and Wally Boyer, centres on two other lines.

MISSING FROM World Hockey Association playoff game Saturday night in Cleveland was goaltender Bernie Parent (above), who apparently is locked in dispute with Philadelphia Blazers over $700,000 guarantee for his services. Club is reported to have withdrawn $600,000 cheque deposited in bank to back up guarantee for remainder of five-year contract. Crusaders took advantage of Parent's absense to whip Blazers 7-1.

Stewart, a two-time world driving champion from Scotland, covered the 117.08 miles in a new Tyrrell Ford in 52 minutes, 13.2 seconds for an minutes, 13.2 seconds for an

But Stewart remained second in the world driving standings since the race did not count toward the championship. Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, the defending driving champion and current leader, failed to get away because of clutch trouble.

Jeane Pierre Jarrier of France set a Formula II lap record at the Hockenheim Ring in West Germany by driving his March BMW to victory in the Jim Clark Memorial, second race in the European championships. Jarrier set a lap record of 2:20.4 on the 4.5-mile course for an average speed of 124.1 m.p.h.

Kent Captures Medal

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Strokes from tee to green notwithstanding, the best thing Ricky Kent did Sunday to nail down medal honors in the CFAX Vancouver Island Open tournament was to carefully check his scorecard.

He gave away the medallist's prize once before and took no chances Sunday. He checked his card every-which-way before signing his name under a 71 that made Kent an easy winner of qualifying-round honors at Glen Meadows.

Kent, 17 at the time, had medal honors wrapped up in 1964 when he scored a 72 at Colwood. Playing scorekeeper Noel Pumfrey inadvertantly marked down a four on a hole where Kent actually took a birdie two. That's the way it had to stand after the signed card was turned in, and Uplands' Gord Pellow took the medallist's prize with a 73 while Kent's penalty-added score went up to a 74.

But even another two-stroke penalty wouldn't have hurt his standing Sunday. Playing superbly from tee to green, the 26-year-old Glen Meadows amateur was the only one of 166 starters to beat par on the 6,677-yard McTavish Road layout.

Scoring an eagle three on the ninth to take the turn one under par, Kent finished three strokes better than Cedar Hill's Greg Barnes, and four ahead of three other amateurs Al MacLeod of Gorge Vale, Cec Ferguson of Gregarah and young Grant Milliken of Gorge Vale.

Scores of 80 or better were required to fill the 32 championship berths. Three of the 80 shooters were drawn out, including a pair of notable casualties.

Two-time champion Norm Boden and Cedar Hill amateur Gord Rands were the big names missing the cut. Also drawn out was Gorge Vale's Tom Maftechu

In addition to Boden, two other professionals failed to qualify. They were Colwood's Bill Court and Ron Cush, who plays out of Cedar Hill.

The qualifying-round test also proved difficult for all assistant pros except Uplands' Bill Billsborough, who made it under the wire with a 79. Missing the cut were Mike Parker of Victoria, Bruce Rands of Cedar Hill and Bill Penny of Glen Meadows.

Former Willingdon Cup player Mike Pyke, appearing in his first Island Open, and Colwood's Ken Floyd were other prominent amateurs missing out. Both scored 81s.

The cutoff for the handicap division broke off at exactly 75. All who scored net 75s or better made it into the first round of match play that begins next Sunday at Gorge Vale.

Oosterhuis Leads By Three Strokes

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Peter Oosterhuis, a globe-trotting Englishman of Dutch heritage who plays out of the Fiji Islands, stalked out of a scrambling pack with a four-under-par 68 and established a three-stroke lead Sunday in the rain-delayed third round of the 37th Masters golf classic.

The lanky Oosterhuis posted a 54-hole total of 211, five under par on the Augusts National Golf Club course that was still heavy from the 2.6 inches of rain that washed out Saturday's play and forced the scheduling of the final round for today.

The 6-foot-4 Oosterhuis only 24 but already one of Britian's ranking stars, was two strokes back of the leading quartet when play started, grabbed a share of the lead with an eagle three on the second hole, was four strokes behind at the turn, tied again only three holes later and then pulled away with dramatic putting down the stretch.

Jack Nicklaus, meanwhile, took an incredible triple-bogey eight on the 15th hole but rallied for a 73, insisted he still had a chance despite his 219 total, eight back.

Osterhuis was one of six players who either led or shared the lead in the frantic scrambling as the pressure began building in this, one of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

J. C. Snead, a raw-boned 31-year-old nephew of veteran Sam Snead; Jimmy Jamieson, who first came to national attention when he challenged in the 1972 Masters, and veteran Bob Goalby, the 1968 winner of this tournament, were the closest at 214.

Jamieson closed with a 70, Goalby had a 71 and Snead had difficulties on the back nine for a 73.

On the 15th Oosterhuis began his incredible putting, the sort of display that so often wins on the usualy slick, lighting fast greens of Augusta National.

He came out of a fairway bunker on the par-five hole, pitched to about 18 feet and holed the downhill putt. On the 16th he missed the green, chipped back poorly but made a 15-footer to save par.

At the 17th he put his approach 18 feet from the cup, made the putt and was five under.

Swift Switch in Pits Pays Off for Forsythe

Does an eight-minute transmission change for an automobile sound impossible?

Maybe, but that's what Terry Forsythe and his pit crew managed to accomplish before Forsythe went out to win both the super-stock fast heat and main event during the season-opening car racing program Sunday at Western Speedway.

Forsythe and crew had to complete what might be a record switch immediately after the qualifying runs.

One official record was set, this one for season-opening attendance — 3,973 fans.

Forsythe led the 35-lap main event from about the fifth lap but was passed by Ron Hancock on the 15th circuit. Hancock stayed in front for another four laps before brushing another car and losing four positions. Forsythe, running a close second at the time, took over the lead and stayed out front the rest of the way.

Roy Haslam, who set fast time during time trials of 18:08 seconds, passed Bob Collins on the final turn of the last lap to place second. Collins finished third and Hancock recovered to place fourth.

Two Victoria Girls Earn Spots on Team

VANCOUVER — Three Vancouver Island girls were named Saturday to the B.C. track and field teams to compete in California later this month — and one of them set a North American record.

the relatively-new, for women, 400-metre hurdles event in 66.3 seconds to establish the mark during trials at Empire Stadium. She also finished second in the 100-metre hurdles in 14.7 seconds.

Also named to the 16-member team were Gail Turney of Duncan, who won the 400-metre event in 57.3 seconds, and Bev Cox of Victoria High School, who was second, one-tenth of a second behind Miss Turney.

Lorna McHattie of UVic and Cheryl Blevins and Ulla Hansen, both of Victoria Mercuries, also took part in the trials but didn't make the team. They will, however, get other opportunities for selection before the team leaves April 25.

Late Tide Surge Trips Fast Birds

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Coach Donn Spence was quite open about it.

If his University of British Columbia Thunderbirds were going to win back the McKechnie Cup, they would have to play fast, wide-open rugby.

"We're smaller, lighter and, hopefully, faster," Spence said with a grin in the dressing room before the Birds met Victoria Crimson Tide at Macdonald Park Saturday in the final game of a four-team, round-robin contest.

"If we get our game together and play the way I know we can, then we should be tough to beat," said Spence.

They got it all together alright and thrilled the crowd of about 700 with the best display of running rugby fans have seen here this season. And only the Tide players know just how tough they were to beat.

Finally, after trailing 0-3 at half time and struggling throughout most of the second half, Victorja scraped to an exciting 8-7 victory to retain the cup — but the team had to come back twice with trys to do it.

Victoria entered the last game as one of the hottest favorites ever in the history of the contest to decide the province's top team after downing Vancouver Norwests 29-9 and thrashing Vancouver Reps by a record 33-0 count. The Tide has been undefeated all season in matches with North American teams, losing only to the visiting Petone club from New Zealand.

The home team began as though it meant business but a combination of bad luck, bad handling and off-form kicking — fullback Alan Rees missed three relatively easy penalty attempts — prevented it from chalking up a big lead.

In fact, it was the Thunderbirds, after being forced to defend desperately inside their own half for 20 minutes, who took a 3-0 lead when standoff-half Mel Reeves booted a penalty goal.

That seemed enough to transform the visitors and they stormed to life in the forwards, winning practically all the ball in the loose and dominating the scrums and lineouts for the rest of the match.

Only some solid tackling by Rees, centres Stu Barber and Tim Cummings and Tide newcomer Graeme Hunter on the wing and some fine cover work by break forward John Wenman stopped the Thunderbirds from running away.

Gudmund Gudmunseth barged over for a great forward try early in the second half to give the Tide a 4-3 lead but UBC winger Will McKenzie crashed through three tackles in an 80-yard sprint up the line for a try.

UBC players and fans were jubilant and that certainly looked the end as far as the Tide was concerned.

Then the Tide forwards, after a surprisingly lethargic game, suddenly came to life with an attack in the left corner. Left winger Wes Thomas came into the line and, with standoff-half Gillie Greig, moved the ball cleverly out to right-winger Hunter, who dived over for the winning try less than three minutes from the end.

"But it says a lot for our boys, too, for them to be able to come back twice like that."

Saxons Help James Bay Complete Rugby Sweep

James Bay blanked Royal Roads 19-0 Sunday, but the result didn't produce much noise in second division circles of the Victoria Rugby Union.

The big salvos had been fired Saturday, when James Bay Athletic Association got a helping hand from University of Victoria Saxons and tucked away the second-division title.

Saxons shocked Nanaimo Hornets 4-0 and their second defeat of the season tumbled the Hornets out of the lead as James Bay downed Castaways 17-6 and snatched the top berth.

Saanich Velox, crushing Oak Bay 21-3 Saturday, also moved ahead of Nanaimo to finish the schedule in second place.

James Bay's final-game surge to the top gave the club a sweep of the Victoria Union's first, second and third division crowns.

UVic Vikings finished second in the Pacific Northwest Intercollegiate Rugby Conference by defeating University of Oregon Ducks 15-10 Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

Bays Shock Royals In Playoff Battle

Oak Bay stunned favored Cosmopolitan Royals 3-1 Sunday and won the right to meet University of Victoria Vikings in the Vancouver Island Soccer League playoff final.

Vikings, who finished in a first-place tie with Royals but took the league title on goal average, cruised into the final Sunday with a 3-0 victory over Nanaimo at Centennial Stadium.

Ted Evans, Vic Escude and Alex Nelson got the Viking goals, all in the second half, and goalkeeper Dave Achurch handled competently for the shutout.

Oak Bay's win over the Royals was the biggest upset in a day of sudden-death semi-finals in the Island League and three divisions of the Victoria and District Soccer League.

Playing in an earlier game at Centennial Stadium, Oak Bay began confidently and with goals by Bill Hamilton, on a penalty, and Trini Douglas, led 2-0 at half time.

Bob Mackie scored Oak Bay's third goal and, although the Royals came back strongly in the second half, they couldn't do any better than a penalty goal by playing-coach Russ Ball.

The Island League final will be at 2 p.m. next Sunday at Royal Athletic Park.

First-place London Boxing Club and Victoria West reached the District League's first division final. Boxers got two goals each from Rick Lamoureaux and John Leier to blast Gorge 5-1 and Wests downed Oak Bay 4-1.

Rick Sylvester scored with only two minutes left to give Labatts a 3-2 win over Victoria West an da berth in the second division final. Wests meet Saanich Braves, who defeated Ducan Village Green 4-0.

Longhorns stormed into the third division final with a 7-0 victory over East Saanich and play Royal Roads, which downed Princess Patricia Light Infantry 4-1.

FIRST DIVISION

VICTORIA WEST (4) — Glen Robinson, Dave Gress, Ralph Anderson, Robbie Williams; OAK BAY (1) — Robert Gutierrez.

Gorge Club Advances On Corners

Goals were hard to come by for two Victoria teams Saturday in the juvenile divisions of the Provincial Cup soccer playoffs and corner kicks proved lucky for only one of them.

Victoria Gorge reached the seventh division semi-finals on a 4-1 advantage in corner kicks. There was no score at the end of regular time in the game with Richmond Roadrunners in Richmond and it was still 0-0 after 20 minutes of overtime.

However, Victoria Evening Optimists were edged 3-2 on corner kicks after battling to a scoreless draw with Alberni Poulson and Prescott in a sixth division match at Port Alberni.

In other juvenile playoff games Saturday, Salt Spring Island defeated Powell River Legion 2-0 in a seventh division quarter-final in Powell River and Victoria Lakehill Builders were eliminated 3-0 by Vancouver Grandview Legion in a fourth division encounter in Vancouver.

In next Saturday's semi-finals Victoria Gorge meets Burnaby Cliff Avenue United at Topaz Park and Salt Spring Island meets Vancouver Dunbar in Vancouver.

STADIUM COSTS RISE

NEW YORK (AP) — Costs to the city for renovation of Yankee Stadium have risen to $27.9 million from the original $21 million estimate.

Blues Wrap Up Title

They ran into more early trouble than anticipated, but New Westminster Blues eventually got around to doing the expected Sunday, trouncing Khalsa 6-0 to clinch the Pacific Coast Soccer League title.

Victory enabled the New Westminster club to end its schdule with 29 points, three ahead of second-place Victoria West-United, which has only a match Saturday with University of British Columbia Thunderbirds remaining.

West-United, edged 1-0 a week ago by Westminster, had closed the gap to one point Saturday by blanking North Shore United 4-0 at Royal Athletic Park.

Tom Forrester and Mike Sails scored early in the game to give West-United a 2-0 lead at half time and Jan Bentley and John Blissett rounded out the scoring in the late stages.

Plucky Khalsa, an Inter-City League team made up mainly of East Indian players, provided unexpected opposition in the first half at Queen's Park in New Westminster, holding the Blues scoreless for 35 minutes and trailing only 0-1 at half time, yielding a tally to Joe Liddle.

But the Blues took over as Khalsa tired quickly in the second half. Gary Thompson and Ron McDonald hammered in two goals each while John Connors got the other counter.

Thompson is the league's leading scorer with 17 goals while McDonald has 16 and George Pakos of West-United is in third place with 12.

In Sunday's other Coast League contest, Inter-Italia, with goals from Fred Bongo and Stenko Bogdanovich, surprised Paul's Canadians 2-1. Alan Bristowe scored for Paul's.

UBC snapped a third-place tie with Victoria Gorge Molsons Saturday by defeating Vancouver Sporting Club of the Inter-City League 3-1 in an interlocking match.

SOUTHPAW DEMOTED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers have optioned lefthanded pitcher Bruce Ellingsen to Albuquerque of the Pacific Coast League.

Wayne Larson scored twice for the Thunderbirds and Maurice White was the other scorer. Reg Newmark got the Sporting Club goal.

Gorge players kept in condition Sunday by downing St. Alice "A" in a second-round Province Cup clash at North Vancouver.

Eight-Goal Spree Marks Sixth Victory by Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Forward Alexander Martynyuk scored a record eight goals Sunday night as the unbeaten Soviet Union won its sixth game in the world amateur hockey championship with an 18-2 romp over West Germany.

Victory kept the Russians in command of the six-team tournament. Sweden was second with a 4-1 record.

Russia opened the scoring at 1:16 of the first period when Alexander Gusev scored. Alexander Yakushev took a backhand pass from Martynyuk and scored at 5:31, and then less than a minute later Martynyuk got his first goal.

Vaclav Nedomansky scored twice to pace Czechoslovakia, now in third place with a 4-2 mark. The Czechs, with four games remaining in which to overtake the Russians, got a two-goal effort from Bohuslav Stastny in the first period Saturday on the way to a 4-2 triumph over Finland.

Sweden's hopes of a world crown were battered Saturday as the Swedes had a four-game victory skein shattered when they were overpowered 6-1 by the Soviet Union.

The Russians, whose nine-year grasp on the world amateur title was broken last year by the Czechs, jumped into 4-0 lead in the first period and were ahead 6-0 before Ulf Sterner beat Soviet netminder Vladislav Tretiak on a breakaway midway in the second period.

Boris Mikhailov, Valery Kharlamov, Alexander Volchov and Vladimir Petrov scored for Russia in the opening session.

Alexander Bodunov made it 5-0 on a breakaway at 5:33 of the second period and Petrov completed the Soviet scoring just 14 seconds later, finishing off a neat play with Mikhailov.

Unser Wins

Gary Bettenhausen finished second with Mike Mosley third.

McDiarmid Rink Wins Top Event

Curlers from the Racquet Club of Victoria collected the major share of awards after final shots were fired Sunday in the Racquet Club's annual blue-and-gold mixed bonspiel.

Charles McDiarmid combined with Lynne McDiarmid, Howie McDiarmid and Pam Taylor for a victory in the spiel's top event, defeating the quartet skipped by Lloyd Larson in a duel of Racquet Club rinks for the "A" event title.

Two other skips from the host club chalked up victories, Ches Hays earning the honors in "B" event and Keith Taylor winning the "D" event.

Hitler Dodged the Draft

New York Times

BONN — Just 40 years after he came to power and 28 years after his downfall many Germans are getting a fresh look at their one-time fuhrer, Adolf Hitler.

It is a look full of surprising disclosures about the man who created the Third Reich and led the German nation to destruction and shame in the Second World War.

The latest issue of the weekly magazine Der Spiegel, published in Hamburg, has a cover article on Hitler based on new discoveries by a Munich historian, Dr. Werner Maser.

Unlike the publication's first cover of Hitler nine years ago, the current picture is unretouched, a mark of changing times and attitudes, the editors said. They explained that in 1964 they altered Hitler's face "out of consideration of foreign readers."

Maser, who is 50 years old, has made the study of Hitler the major work of his life. In 1971 he published a biography of the dictator that has been considered outstanding. As a result, scores of readers have sent him extraordinary documents that cast new light on Hitler's early life.

On the basis of the documents — letters, postcards and sketches — Maser concluded that earlier portrayals of the young Hitler — including Hitler's own — as a homeless, starving tramp in Vienna after the turn of the century were "incorrect."

He disclosed that Hitler not only had influential friends who helped him get apprenticeships in the Austrian capital but also had access to adequate financial sources for most of his stay there from 1906 to 1913. For a time, it appears, Hitler also received 25 crowns a month as an orphan and he also inherited a not insubstantial sum from his family.

In any case, his was not the "hard fate" Hitler later described in his autobiography Mein Kampf, Maser concludes.

The scholar, who teaches at the Munich College of Politics, also disclosed that for more than a year Austrian draft authorities had chased Hitler, who fled from one dwelling to another, finally escaping to Munich, where he was caught in 1914.

Maser's new work on Hitler, drawing on the latest documents, is to be issued this week by the Econ publishing house in Dusseldorf.

STUDENTS TO PARIS FOR EASTER

Twenty-seven Victoria high school students will be among 173 in B.C. who will spend Easter in Paris.

The two-week visit is planned as an immersion course in French. No English is to be spoken.

The students are guests of the French education ministry and will stay at a state boarding school at Versailles. They will have three hours of French instruction each morning and will spend the rest of the day sightseeing.

The Victoria group leaves Thursday and will travel with 14 students from other parts of the Island. They will be escorted by two teachers, Barbara Lang of Esquimalt Senior Secondary and David Massy of Belmont Senior Secondary.

Peking Basho Bouts Leave Chou-En-lai Chortling

By JOHN BURNS
Special to The Times

PEKING — If appearances are anything to go by, the ancient Japanese sport of Sumo wrestling has a new fan: Chinese Premier Chou En-lai.

The 74-year-old Chinese leader applauded strongly at times — and laughed just as heartily at others — as the 300-pound champions of the sport displayed their prowess in an exhibition in the workers stadium here last night.

The premier, accompanied by Yeh Chien-ying, a Red Army marshal who is serving as acting minister of defence, arrived about half way through the 2½-hour exhibition.

Neither man has appeared to be so fascinated by any sports display — other than pingpong, of which Chou is an avid fan — that he has attended in recent years.

At one point, when a relative lightweight of 250 pounds lifted a behemoth of 350 and tossed him bodily from the ring, the premier shook with laughter and cupped his hand to his mouth to make a jocular aside to the marshal.

The premier's reaction — excitement at the combat, curiosity at the elaborate ritual of the sport and mirth at some of the wrestlers' antics — was typical of the response of the 60,000 people who have crammed into every available seat in the stadium for the four performances given by the Sumo troupe during the past week.

Teen-age soldiers with forage caps pulled down about their ears could not disguise their mirth at the first sight of the improbable-looking sportsmen, their obesity revealed by the skimpy jock-strap-like truss of starched silk called a mawashi that is worn in the ring.

However, the laughter quickly turned to bemusement as the wrestlers, moved through the elaborate ritual that precedes each bout, bowing low to each other, dusting their armpits to show their cleanliness, throwing salt into the ring to purify it and stamping their feet to drive away evil spirits.

A Western spectator at the bouts — or bashos the Japanese appropriately call them — could not help being struck by the great contrast between the popular cultures of the two great nations of Asia as reflected in the Chinese reaction to the Sumo exhibition.

She Can Put Her Teeth Into It Now

TORONTO (CP) — Gertrude Cormay, a 76-year-old Toronto pensioner, has eaten only soft foods since she broke her lower denture 15 years ago.

But this summer she will get new dentures for only $10.

Dixon Hall, a community dental clinic, will provide them. The centre concentrates on providing low-cost dental service for the working poor.

"People on welfare can get dental care free," Dennis Morrice, Dixon Hall's executive director, said Friday, "but the guy who is working has to pay for himself. If he is poor, there is no way he can have any money left over after he pays his rent and buys food, to go to a dentist.

"A dentist is a luxury. You should see some of these people when they first walk in here. They have a whole mouthful of cavities."

It charges $1 a visit, no matter how extensive the work. Dentures cost $10, including preliminary visits, fittings and the dentures themselves.

CITY RCMP OFFICER INJURED IN ALBERTA

Const. Russell William Sturgeon was sitting in a police car being used as a roadblock to stop a vehicle under chase by another police car on Highway 2 near Red Deer.

The vehicle under chase crashed into the side of the stationary police car, injuring two of its three occupants and all three police officers sitting at the roadblock.

Const. Neal McRae Henderson, 24, of Fredericton, is also in serious condition in University Hospital in Edmonton and Const. George Watson, 24, of Kenora, Ont., is in good condition in Red Deer General Hospital.

Contract Bridge Tourney

Bridge players from across North America will be in Victoria from April 18 to 23 for the B.C. regional bridge tournament of the American Contract Bridge League.

The 250-member Victoria Duplicate Bridge Club is host for the tournament, which will be attended by 1,000 bridge players and held at the Empress Hotel.

Many players will be trying to win their life master title at the tournament, said Dave King, vice-president of the local club.

To be a life master, a bridge player must earn 300 black points and 40 red points. Red points can only be earned in regional or national tournament games, said King. The Victoria club has 20 life masters, he said.

Life Without a Steak? —The Vegetarian View

It seemed a moderately witty notion, in view of the current alarms over the high cost of meat, to look into the possibilities of becoming a vegetarian and I wish someone would break both my arms when I get these ideas.

I had enlisted the help of the two couples I know who eat no meat, as a dietary way of life, warning them that my interest was mainly if not entirely journalistic, and before you could say "Medium rare" my desk was groaning under the weight of periodicals, tracts, studies, surveys and books that may just possibly be the most persuasive of any ever printed.

I should say right here at the beginning that the very idea of Bean Burgers, Peanut-Sesame Loaf Supreme, Nutty Noodle Casserole, Vegetarian Enchiladas, Savory Onion Quiche and Crunchy Granola causes my taste buds actual physical pain, but the arguments for vegetarianism are so downright compelling that it may be weeks before I can bite into a small steak without feeling guilt. It may be weeks before I can afford one, too, but that's beside the point.

If there is a degree of fanaticism in the vegetarian's arguments or a tendency to become evangelical it is only because both of the principal reasons for embracing it make a lot of sense.

With some, you see, it began with a revulsion over the killing of innocent beasts for human consumption ("this gnawing and slobbering over animal flesh," as one puts it), but there are many more who, less emotionally, have given up flesh to search consciously for a diet pattern that will offer something more sensible than our present food consumption ("the malnutrition of gluttony" as another describes the way we eat).

It's not an easy way to go, in either case, as an alternative. You do not simply pop some nuts into your mouth or spoon in some yogurt. It requires an encyclopedic knowledge of nutrients and some imaginative improvising to provide a menu that won't be dull.

Both the wives I've consulted agree that shopping and the preparation of meals are more time-consuming and demanding than they are for the woman who simply obeys her whims in the supermarket. That probably explains why there's a wide variety of literature on the subject, one book, "Diet For A Small Planet" by Frances Moore Lappe, being required reading.

The aim is to find that magic formula of proteins, the building bricks of body tissues, that will check the more or less constant process of breaking down and wearing out that, it seems, happens to your poor old body and mine.

The vegetarians say — and demonstrate only too well — that we over-indulge in carbohydrates and refined sugars, that we're "starch-eaters and the sugar-babies" existing on a diet that makes fat and flab, weak hearts and under-sized muscles. One of the meaner spokesmen of the breed has described the way we eat as similar to running a Rolls-Royce on paraffin.

The soya bean, the peanut, the sunflower seed and yeast aren't simply substitutes for protein meat, but are richer in protein content, pound for pound, than anything you'll find at your friendly neighborhood butcher's.

Harcourt Roy, the most articulate guru of the non-meat-eaters, puts it all very succinctly and with that characteristic enthusiasm that I have found almost irresistible: "Your long-term aim is to reduce the starches and sugars, increase the proteins, plus, of course, the vitamin-rich fruits, vegetables and salads. Your body will love you for it. In fact, you'll feel so frisky that you will have to check your birth certificate to find out if you really are the same person. You could become a menace."

With many, of course, it goes deeper than that. They see the day when the continued use of the cow, calf, steer, pig and chicken will simply be so uneconomical that they'll be obsolete. Canada Packers can't say they haven't been warned.

Edward T. Banks, another immensely persuasive writer on the subject, says, "The world will not be able to sustain life, at the present rate of population expansion, by means of the wasteful method of providing something like eight tons of vegetable food for an animal in order to produce one ton of chemicalized meat."

It's a point that's a kind of catechism with vegetarians — they'll tell you, for example, that the world acreage of food production lands could be doubled if we relied on growing rather than grazing — but down deep they've a realistic pessimism.

The fact they recognize is that most of us are disinterested in diet for purely nutritional reasons, that we've a kind of sensual pleasure in eating, dictated by habit and custom, that we're push-overs for the taste manipulators, slaves to a sizzling steak, whatever the cost, and I am very much afraid that they are right.

Better Bus Service in May

Bus service in Greater Victoria is being improved with extension of most runs on week-day and Saturday evenings next month.

The announcement came today from Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, who said the extensions are possible using the existing fleet of urban buses.

The changes in Victoria will see buses on most routes running every 40 minutes between the hours of 6 p.m. and midnight. Current service on most runs is hourly between those hours.

The Gordon Head service remains with buses every 30 minutes and Cadboro Bay service will remain hourly.

Service on Sundays will be increased with buses running every 40 minutes between 8:40 a.m. and 10:40 p.m. This replaces the existing service which runs from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Lorimer said the changes will take effect May 4. Similar changes are planned for the Greater Vancouver area.

The beefed up service will require services of about six new drivers, according to a B.C. Hydro official. But no cost figures are available yet.

He said the route time increases announced by Lorimer covered most of the changes but a few final details may be announced later.

Saanich Taxpayers Face Hike

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Saanich aldermen tonight begin their annual series of budget-trimming sessions with a view to cutting the fat off what looks like a 5.5 mill tax increase.

If the trend since 1970 holds true, council will likely aim at keeping the increase to around three mills, or $461,430 in a provisional budget requiring $7.5 million to be raised by taxation, out of total estimated revenue of $18.35 million.

The rest of this week is clear for additional meetings of council if required, but Mayor Hugh Curtis said aldermen would "more than likely" have the 1973 budget set in three consecutive evenings.

"I couldn't guess how we will end up," Curtis said, "but I don't think any member of council will tolerate a 5.5 mill increase."

Ald. Leslie Passmore, chairman of finance committee, said he could not estimate how much council would trim. As far as he was concerned the budget estmates prepared by departments and examined by department heads, comptroller, municipal administrator and committee chairmen were calculated closely already.

He guessed the additional amount required from general taxation would cost an average homeowner about $40, less the $15 increase on this year's provincial homeowner grant.

The amount of tax revenue which one mill will raise in 1973 is $153,810, compared with $146,775 in 1972.

Revenue increases this year, other than what will be raised by direct tax on property, amount to only $2 per capita, or less than one mill — $130,080.

On the debit side, Saanich along with other municipalities, must pay more for social assistance benefits this year. The exact amount has not been apportioned, but the provisional budget allows for $831,500 as the municipal share, compared with $810,000 in the 1972 budget.

Curtis said the increased amount will apply to only seven months of the year, starting June 1.

He said the 5.5 mill proposed increase in budget estimates is the smallest in at least four years.

In 1970 council trimmed a 6.66 mill increase to 4.9 mills; in 1971 they cut 7.32 down to three, and last year cut 6.69 to 2.5.

Curtis' own view of municipal priorities remains as it was a year ago:

"We must attempt to keep drainage work at its highest possible level," both to ease the risk of winter flooding of residential property, and to "lay the proper foundation for road construction later."

There will be no significant staff increases this year, the mayor indicated, but the police budget is up $180,590, the fire budget up $177,619 and the Saanich share of Greater Victoria Public Library costs up by $70,000, including provision for a new Saanich branch.

In addition, Saanich will open its fourth major recreation facility in May, and council faces a substantial list of requested grants from community organizations, a total of $116,380 compared with $83,500 actually granted last year.

Charge Laid In Hit-Run Fatality

John Hudson, 48, of 743 Massie, was today charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, in which a female pedestrian died Saturday.

Hudson was remanded to April 17 without plea, to seek legal advice.

Colwood RCMP said today a man turned himself in 12 hours after the accident following the death of 46-year-old Ella Howard of 17 Edgewater Motel.

The man told RCMP he had heard they were looking for a damaged 1964 Pontiac in connection with the hit and run, near Parsons's Bridge.

The dead woman's companion, Oliver Memnook, 37, of 957 Menzies, injured in the accident as he walked along the old Island Highway at 1 a.m., Saturday. He is reported in good condition in Victoria General Hospital today.

CITY STANDS FIRM

Harbor for People Concept Favored

The city has no intention of changing its mind on establishment of a new ambulance service, Ald. Percy Frampton said today after meeting with spokesmen for employees of Garden City Ambulance.

Frampton, who chairs Victoria council's health committee, said he didn't think the employees even hoped they could get council to abandon their plans.

"They can see the writing on the wall," Frampton said. "They're just concerned about their jobs."

The Garden City employees had earlier threatened to walk off their jobs today if no meeting was set up with city. They issued that ultimatum Friday after learning that a new ambulance service would be set up July 1 to handle the city's emergency needs.

The city plan calls for the new service to be operated out of Victoria General Hospital on an interim basis, with the prospect of a regional service ultimately being organized by the provincial government.

Garden City has served the city's emergency needs since 1968, but their $60,000 a year contract expires June 30.

"The men are just concerned about their jobs," Frampton said. "I assured them they would have every opportunity to apply for a position at Victoria General.

"We never intended to just use staff already at the hospital," he said, "and anyone can apply for the job."

Ed Pheifle, one of nine Garden City employees, said earlier it would be foolish for the hospital to train new drivers, when he and his co-workers were already trained and experienced.

The new service will require a staff of six to operate the single ambulance the city intends to buy.

City of Victoria aldermen interviewed today say they like architect Arthur Erickson's suggestions for development of the Inner Harbor, but have some doubts about cutting it off with a walkway.

Erickson showed a preliminary design to city officials and downtown businessmen last week to get feedback for his $35,000 general plan. He requested the meeting be kept confidential to prevent controversy.

Features of the presentation were: one-way traffic and wider sidewalks on Government and Wharf; dense building on the city's Ocean Cement site; an amphitheatre-type suntrap where the Blackball ferry now is; and a pedestrian causeway from Laurel Point to Wharf Street turning the Inner Harbor into a non-tidal water.

The designs appeared to scotch Ald. Sam Bawlf's plans for a traffic-free mall on Government Street, but Bawlf was not available for comment today.

Ald. Clyde Savage said he approved of Erickson's general concept that the Inner Harbor should be developed for people. Asked about the apparent end of Government mall plans, Savage said: "Thank goodness."

Building development at the Ocean Cement site should go ahead only if the Reid Centre next door does not materialize, Savage said. If the Centre is built, the site should become a park.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said he thought Erickson's attitude to traffic on Government and Wharf was "realistic," and he thought the causeway link suggestion was "an attractive idea."

"I think he's on the right track — creating a more formal area fronting the parliament buildings and hotels," Anderson said.

Ald. Mike Young said he thought plans for a Government Street mall had been scrapped by Erickson "in concert with the city."

The causeway link Young said was "an interesting idea," although he did not like the suggestion of tidal locks.

The link would be important, however, "particularly if we make development on the Ocean Cement site at the density proposed."

He expressed the reservation that the whole scheme handed everybody round the harbor "something on a tremendous plate."

"Really we are giving the Empress a new lease of life as well as removing an unproductive piece of property from Marathon (waterfront on Belleville). They should give that to the city."

Erickson's proposals were "a development of council's concepts," Young said.

Ald. Percy Frampton said he "rather enjoyed" the proposals and found them "refreshing."

The causeway link was "interesting" but Frampton feared cutting boats off from the inner area. Narrowing of Government Street he said was not a good idea, but he liked the suggestion of planting trees along the lower-level walkway currently being built.

Ald. Tom Christie said he was of two minds about the causeway link idea. He did not like to shut off the inner area to traditional pleasure craft, but "making a pond has a sort of appeal." In a long view a close look would have to be taken at the finances, he said.

Hikers Alarmed, Cougar Shot

A cougar was shot near Jordan River Sunday after it frightened three hikers on the trail to Sombrio Beach.

George Pedneault, a Sooke game hunter was called in to shoot the animal about 4 p.m. after the hikers had stunned it with a rock earlier in the afternoon.

Bertha Davies, wife of one of the hikers, said today cougars are seldom seen by people in the area but this animal was "very thin and probably hungry."

She said her husband George was walking up the 1½-mile trail when an animal brushed up against his legs. He apparently thought it was a dog as first and took no notice of it.

When Davies realized it was a cougar he screamed and frightened the animal which then started jumping and snarling at the hikers.

When the cougar retreated to a creek bed Mrs. Davies said her husband threw a rock which hit the animal on the side of the head leaving it stunned.

The hikers then hurried up the remainder of the trail and called Pedneault who found the cougar up a tree when he came back to shoot it.

"There's a lot of children and hippie kids living at the beach," Mrs. Davies said, "and they've been frightened by the cougar's tracks."

House Blaze Injures Woman

Muriel Pattle, of 2-320 Moss, was in good condition today in Victoria General Hospital, where she had been treated for smoke inhalation.

Saboteur Burns Cathedral Ballots

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

It was a clear cut case of sabotage at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral Sunday.

When scrutineers went Sunday evening to count votes by 1,500 parishioners on their choice for a color scheme for the exterior of the cathedral, they found nothing but ashes in the ballot box.

Parish council chairman Frank Pellizzon said the ballot box had been pried open after the 5 p.m. Mass, the ballots burned, and the ashes left in the box.

Parishioners had been asked to choose one of five color schemes, samples of which had been painted and numbered on the windows of the View Street side of the building.

They dropped their votes in the ballot box, located at the back of the church after each Mass on Sunday.

The painting was to have begun early this morning after the votes were counted, "but now we'll have to wait a week," said Pellizzon.

"I don't have any idea why anyone would do such a thing."

The council has scheduled another balloting to take place this Sunday and ballot box security will be tightened somewhat, "but we don't expect it to happen two times in a row," he said.

Pellizzon asks that all parishioners cast their votes again next week. The same procedure will be followed.

Choices include moss green and gold, moss green and mauve, gold and two shades of green, and a combination of salmon, gun metal grey and yellow.

"I think our parishioners are going to be awfully disappointed when they find out, but we'll just have to try it again," said Pellizon adding that most became "really involved" in choosing a color scheme.

Recycling Depot Waits for You

it's our environment

By THE ENVIRONMENTAL CENTRE OF GREATER VICTORIA

It's easy to underrate or take for granted things which are close to home even when they are deserving of national and maybe international recognition.

QUESTION: At the insistence of a neighbour, I recently visited the recycling depot on Borden Street for the first time. I was amazed at how efficiently it is set up and by the tremendous amounts of bottles, paper, tins, etc., that are processed for re-use. Since I'm sure there are others like myself who have never availed themselves to this service, I wonder why the project doesn't see fit to advertise some? Also, could you tell me if, as I suspect, Victoria is far ahead of much of North America in this respect? — A.C.J.

ANSWER: We're glad you've started making use of the recycling depot. The staff and volunteers do have the depot set up to make separation of your trash a simple chore.

They haven't advertised because they really have never believed it was necessary. Instead, they will go out and speak to schools or groups upon request. Of course, the recycling project is a non-profit one which has relied on volunteer labor throughout most of its existence, and there never have been extra funds available for things like advertising. However, the operation has, as you may recall, received a great deal of publicity in the local newspapers since it first got under way.

While the Victoria project has proven highly successful, it would be difficult to compare it with recycling operations in other parts of the world. It seems that about every city in North America now has some sort of a recycling arrangement. It is true that Victoria's project has far better public support than most, however.

In different parts of the world, problems of solid waste are handled differently. For example, the International Institute for Environmental Affairs reports that Bern, Switzerland, burns its garbage to fuel steam generators and Milan, Italy, is designing a subway system that will run on electricity produced from burning garbage. In San Diego, California, a company is compacting shredded waste paper into small cubes for export as paper pulp.

The real answer, however, is not to use solid wastes as either fuel, building material or landfill, but instead to re-use the materials for the same purposes as they were originally intended (as some beverage bottles are re-used, for example). This would preclude much of the "designed-to-be-thrown-away" wasteful packaging that creates these solid wastes in the first place.

The recycling depot, of course, is a step in that direction. The next step will be for us to sort our own garbage at home for pickup by municipal crews. We'd like to think Victoria is closer to doing that than most cities. Yet tons of aluminum to be kept separate reusable material are daily hauled to the landfill and separate from other garbage buried.

Other areas are moving toward extensive municipal recycling. Some cities are requiring newspapers to be kept separate from other garbage. Hemstead, New York, is considering requiring glass and aluminum to be kept separate, too.

As we start separating our trash, we become aware of how much excess packaging we buy and then discard.

QUESTION: Is there any difference between brown and white eggs? I've heard differing answers to the question. Can you give me the facts? — No Name.

ANSWER: Certain breeds of hens lay brown eggs — New Hampshires, for instance. Other breeds such as Leghorns produce white eggs. Assuming a New Hampshire hen and a Leghorn hen eat the same food, the eggs of each should be identical in flavor and nutritional value, and only the amount of brown pigment in the outside shell will be different. Also, brown and white eggs should have the same keeping qualities presuming they are stored in the same way.

We've heard people who swear brown eggs are superior to white, but we've not been able to find any evidence to support this theory. We suspect it may be because formerly the major egg-producing breeds of hens were those that laid white-shelled eggs. These were the only breeds that big egg farms would keep. Heavier, less nervous sorts of meat-producing chickens that laid brown eggs, on the other hand, are the kind of birds that more commonly were kept in farmyards and backyard coops. Because these hens could scratch about, eat weeds, grass and insects as well as grain, their brown eggs were more richly flavoured than those of the white-egg layers kept in cages and fed strict, unvaried diets by the chicken farmers.

However, given the same food and environment, both brown and white egg-producing hens produce identical eggs from what we can learn.

If you're interested in having hundreds of household tips on protecting our environment, why not get yourself a copy of the handbook You Can Do Something, published by the Environmental Centre of Greater Victoria. The 40-page booklet is available at the Environmental Centre's office, 508 Fort Street, for only 10 cents a copy.

And if you have a question about any subject involving our environment, we'd like to hear from you. Leave the question at the Environmental Centre office any weekday afternoon, or mail it directly to It's Our Environment, care of the Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

Hospital Elevator Ills Brings Ups and Downs

The long drawn out strike of elevator maintainence personnel is hopefully over. Men are back on the job. And the collective high of relief from hospitals and other institutions dedicated to caring for the sick and the aged can be heard across the country.

In the Greater Victoria area, hospital staffs have been working for months with curtailed elevator service. Slowed up in their various routines, these men and women have kept smiling and despite the many inconveniences, they have coped.

Nowhere has this been more evident than at Gorge Road Hospital, where one elevator (out of a possible three has been in service almost around the clock.)

And where hospital administrator W. E. Morrison tells you if it had not been for the co-operation of staff, the one elevator would have been of little help.

Dorothy Youlden, director of nursing adds to the story-when she explains that members of her staff have climbed the stairs, day after day to do their work.

She speaks of nurses picking up sterilized equipment and medications from a central supply room and the pharmacy, both in the basement, and carrying these necessities up the stairs to the various floors.

"In the long run it's been quicker to walk than wait in hope of getting a ride," she says. "The elevator has been so over-worked tansporting meals to the various floors and bringing ambulance cases into the hospital."

Nurses have also taken on the added work of helping elderly relatives visiting hospitay patients, to climb up and down stairs.

Janet Ralph, building and housekeeping services manager, tells how heavy floor polishers and vacuums "have been lifted up and down stairs from floor to floor". How fresh linens have been taken from utility rooms and carried to the various floors for the more than 400 beds in the hospital. How housekeeping supplies have been handled in the same way.

Like Mrs. Youlden she makes inspection tours of the various floors each day.

"And invariably, if I'm on the fourth, word comes over the inter-com that I'm needed right away on the first — so I walk down. It happens over and over again."

Then she concludes "this one-elevator thing has added miles to everyone's steps."

William Ona, food services manager, merely says "we've managed", when you ask about getting food to the patients with only one elevator in operation.

Then he explains that while food service has precedence over many routines in the hospital it "it stand aside when it comes to transporting stretcher cases and wheelchair patients. "In such instances we pull our food wagons off the elevator and turn it over as quickly as possible".

This can result in a chain-re-action, he points out. When we are late in getting food to the various floors, it makes the nurses late in serving it to patients. Then, it's late when we get the empties back. And, before we know it the next meal is crowding us."

With the modern containers now in use, food will stay hot as long as three-quarters of an hour, he says. "But when you can only put one wagon at a time aboard the elevator, get it to nursing stations, then allow time for nurses to take trays to the rooms, it can — and does — pose some problems."

His kitchen staff serves approximately 400 meals to the various floors in both the rehabilitation centre and the extended care wing, three times a day.

Another 450 servings of food go into the cafeteria. There is also the snack wagons that go around mid-morning, afternoon and evening.

"We've managed to maintain a fairly high standard," Ona says, "but it has not been easy."

Administrator Morrison echoes that statement for all departments of the hospital.

Then he says with a sigh of relief "they are working on the elevators now. And hopefully, in another week, we'll have all three in service."

Voyeur Needs Help

DEAR ABBY: We love the house we moved into last spring, but there is a problem with the boy next door. He is almost 16, and I have seen him looking into our windows with binoculars during the day time as well as at night. He also used to stare at me when I was sunbathing on our deck over our porch.

I thought perhaps it was just a young boy's normal curiosity, so I made certain the shades were drawn while I was dressing, and I never went around the house half-clothed.

It gave me a rather uncomfortable feeling to wonder if I were being watched, but I didn't really become upset until last week when I received an obscene letter from this boy. He wasn't even ashamed to sign his name.

Should I speak to him? Or should I go directly to his parents? Or should I just keep my shades drawn and my doors bolted and pretend that nothing has happened? — Annoyed

DEAR ANNOYED: Go directly to his parents and tell them what you have told me. The boy appears to be disturbed, and needs to be psychiatrically examined. For his sake, and the sake of his family and society, please follow my suggestion at once.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the employer who made it a policy never to hire a teen-ager whose parents lined up the job reminded me of my own experience.

My father was well-connected in our town, so he would get me a summer job every year from the time I was 15. (I later learned that my father even paid my salary, which was a terrible blow to my ego.)

I was an average student, but my father used his influence to get me into his college which was way over my head. It took me five years to graduate, but it made my father very happy.

After gaduation my father continued to run interference for me, and to make a long story short, in his well-intentioned efforts to help me, he all but destroyed my self-confidence.

Abby, please tell parents that unless kids are allowed to try their wings, they'll never learn to fly on their own. — Still Learning At 35.

DEAR STILL: You did it very well. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ABBY: Your idealistic philosophy of "sharing, and caring" is beautiful in theory, but it doesn't work. I learned that 15 years ago.

We took our young family to a public park, hoping to enjoy an outdoor picnic supper. We were all set to have a lovely time when a family of loud, crude characters moved in next to us and started to get friendly. They had a bunch of dirty looking children and a couple of mangy dogs sniffing everybody and everything in sight.

This unattractive carload of people soon took over the whole area. We had no privacy, and could hardly wait to pack up and head for home.

When we arrived home, we discovered several things were missing from our car. Then I remembered that a couple of the children had engaged us in conversation in order to distract us while some of the others were looting our car.

That cured us! Sorry, Abby, I am not interested in characters, thieves, juvenile delinquents, and dogs that urinate on my picnic basket. — "Just Me" in N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Pardon me while I laugh at the foolish 47-year-old woman who refused to be called "Grandma." I married a widower with three lovely children 10 years ago. Today I am probably the proudest Grandma in the world, and I am only 29! — Grandma (step or otherwise).

MAN HANGS TO PROTEST POVERTY

OSAKA, Japan (UPI) — A man hanged himself in a department store in protest of recent alleged hoarding by leading Japanese trading firms police said. The man was found hanging near a stairway.

He left a note saying, "things are wrong in this world and the poor can never be better off . . . big trading firms are hoarding daily necessities and pollution is making it hard for men to live . . ."

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

The earlier a child understands the health hazards of smoking, the more likely will he refrain from puffing on cigarettes as he grows up.

If you have a first, second or third grader, let him read the 18-page illustrated No Smoking—Lungs at Work. This booklet will show him how smoking affects his breathing apparatus and especially his lungs.

The booklet is written in a very simple question-and-answer format, and the major part of each page is an illustration. There is also space for your youngster's replies.

For instance, below a sketch of something that looks very much like an upside-down tree with branches and twigs the young reader is asked what he thinks the picture represents. The right answer is of course, the lungs.

Your child is never too young to know that smoking will endanger his health. As the book says, the best way not to get hooked on cigarettes is never to bite!

Home Birth Movement Triggers Drive To Update Midwifery

New York Times

A number of women in this state agree with Whitt, a general practitioner, and have revived the ancient art of midwifery, which has been outlawed in California since 1949.

Raven Lang, who founded the birth centre in Santa Cruz, about 100 miles south of San Francisco, and is one of seven midwives practicing there, said "Home births create a more loving and sounder bond between the child and family."

Law May Change

Every time Miss Lang, who has had no formal medical training, helps bring a baby into the world, she commits a misdemeanor. This is also the case for Helen Swallow, a 32-year-old nurse working with Whitt who has been licensed as a nurse-midwife in New York. But this may change soon.

There is a move afoot to legalize midwifery here and set up formal training programs for a variety of reasons, including the preference of many couples to have "natural" childbirths, a shortage of doctors, particularly in rural areas, and the desire of some women's liberationists to avoid male obstetricians.

Assemblyman Gordon Duffy, a Republican, has indicated he will introduce a bill in the legislature this year to expand the scope of the functions nurses can legally perform, including normal childbirth.

Dr. George Cunningham, chief of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Health in the State Public Health Department, said a survey of California hospitals indicated that about 500 nurse-midwives could be employed immediately.

Nationally, the number of midwives has risen from 400 to 1,200 in the last deeade in the 30 states where midwifery is legal.

Although only about 3,000 of the 300,000 births annually in California occur at home, they are symbolic of the growing repugnance that many women express about impersonal care they received from doctors during pregnance and at a hospital around birth time, Cunningham aid.

Costly Experience

"The business of having a baby now in an ordinary hospital is an expensive and frequently impersonal experience," he said. "Many doctors are overworked and brusque in their approach. We see midwifery as a way to humanize childbirth."

Rosemary Mann, who teaches nursing at the university of California (San Francisco) Medical School, explained, "Women are no longer considering pregnancy an illness and they are demanding we consider it normal. They want their husband or family to be at the birth. They didn't make the baby alone and they don't want to deliver it alone."

However, neither Cunningham nor Miss Mann, who is chairman of the Northern California Chapter of the American College of Nurse-Midwives, is enthusiastic about home births.

"In certain circumstances home deliveries can be very safe and desirable. But an obstetric emergency happens quickly," Miss Mann says. "You have little time to react."

Twenty Pound Loss Means A Gain of Self Confidence

This is the last in a series of 15 articles in which Josephine Lowman, author of WHY GROW OLD? and leading authority on health and beauty, tells you exactly what to do to lose 20 pounds in eight weeks.

How time flies! Here we are at the last week of Bip. Those of you who started at first have only one more week to finish. I am sure congratulations are in order for thousands of you! I know it took determination and self-discipline, but I have no doubt that you are finding that the results are worth every bit of the effort.

I have seen this happen so many times, the dramatic way a loss of overweight and a course in self-improvement can change a woman's life. Energy increases, self-confidence picks up, tasks which seemed impossible now seem simple, a zest for life returns! It can make all the difference in the world!

I hope those of you who who have reached your goal and will not slip back into the old habits which piled the pounds on you in the first place.. Too little exercise and too much food can sneak up on you again if you are not careful. You probably feel so carefree and successful that you might become thoughtless in these matters.

Beauty Improvement Plan BY Josephine Lowman

Many women wish to know how many calories they should have to maintain their ideal weight. This depends on several factors such as size, age, metabolism and physical activity. However, there are certain rules to follow which will give you some idea of what your daily food intake should be. A report a few years ago by the food and nutrition board of the National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council suggested the following as a guide:

Women 18 to 35: multiply weight by 12.3 and add 525.

Women 35 to 55: multiply weight by 11 and add 475.

Women 55 to 75: multiply weight by 8.9 and add 400.

You may find it simpler to multiply your ideal weight by 18 if yu are fairly active, 16 if you get only a little exercise and 14 if you get practically no exercise.

In order to maintain your ideal weight make it a lifetime habit to weigh once a week. At the first sign of trouble, start yur diet again. Do not wait for the first 8 or 10 punds too many. Go after the first 2 or 3 pounds and you will not have any figure trouble.

This is the last time I will offer my eight-week Beauty Improvement Plan for a long time. If you would like to start now for a loss of from 15 to 20 pounds in the next eight weeks, you may want my Bip Kit. This gives you essential directions, spot reducing exercises, slimming menus for two weeks, a calorie chart and a wall chart on which you can watch your beauty line rise and your weight line drop. If you would like to have this kit send 50 cents and a self-addressed, stamped, long envelope to Josephine Lowman in care of the Times, 2621 Douglas Street, Victoria.

LIE ON FLOOR on your back with your arms resting on the floor, extending out from the shoulders, palms toward the floor. Raise your legs halfway up to a right angle position. Swing them to the left and then back to the right like the pendulum of a clock. The knees should be straight throughout this exercise. You may want to do this only two or three times at first. An excellent waist and abdominal exercise if continued regularly.

Paraplegic Beats Despondent Hold

HAMILTON (CP) — Four years ago, Neil Quesnel had a well-paying job and the usual assortment of dreams for his family. Then he became permanently disabled and has been told he will be a complete paraplegic within a few years.

Quesnel, now 34, said that at first he cried.

"I sat down and cried my eyes out many times. All our hopes and dreams had gone right down the drain."

Two years ago, after months of despondency, Mr. Quesnel hesitatingly accepted a suggestion that he get involved with community affairs, and it has changed his life.

Now he is taking classes at Mohawk College one night a week and plans to become a social worker's assistant in about three years. From there, he is hoping to manage a degree of bachelor of social work.

COUNSELLOR SEEN

"I don't want to have that vegetable feeling. There's no reason why a paraplegic can't function as an effective social worker."

Quesnel was referred to a Mohawk counsellor for advice by the fledgling Sher-Wen Community Association which works with residents of the Mohawk Gardens public housing project where the Quesnels and their four daughters live.

It was at the suggestion of a social worker that Mr. Quesnel first nervously attended a meeting for the Gardens residents on provincial welfare.

"I was very reluctant to open out at first, but it didn't take me too long. They had me elected chairman in the following year."

Quesnel joined the Social Planning and Research Council and was appointed to a task force to study welfare and low income problems. Now he is on the board of directors.

He is an executive member of the Ontario Anti-Poverty Organization and a member of the Citizen Community Council Association.

"The idea is to get people who are permanently disabled involved in not just their specific problems, but to get them doing something they feel will make them part of society."

Quesnel says his yearly income for his family is $4,000, one-third from provincial benefits, the rest from an insurance scheme he joined while he was working. City welfare helps out with drugs and dental work. He pays $99 a month rent on his semi-detached Ontario Housing Corporation home.

His wife, a former hairdresser, says they agreed she should not work.

"I feel I would be degrading him. He feels bad enough as it is that he can't work."

Avant-Garde Drop Accent on Fidelity

By ENID NEMY

NEW YORK — The concept of fidelity, whether it be in a nonlegalized relationship or in marriage, is being increasingly questioned by many young adults. To many of this avant-garde group, the word itself is an anachronism.

To many of these young men and women, a closed one-to-one relationship is almost automatically equated with jealousy and possessiveness, emotions they both reject and fear.

"What they are trying to say is that people are free spirits and shouldn't be pinned down," said Dr. Everett Dulit, a psychiatrist whose specialty is adolescents and young adults.

"They are committed to not considering other people as property . . . to them it's like pinning down a butterfly or picking wild flowers . . . Their commitment is not to pick or catch and take things home as theirs."

Dr. Dulit, who is associated with the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, and others who have dealt with the subject professionally noted, however, that despite emergence of new social patterns, the majority of young people today "are in no way different from young people 10, 20 and 30 years ago."

"There's a wide variation still as to what they think about fidelity and what it means to them," said Dr. Robert Gould. "There's certainly more openness to more sexual experiences . . . They seem to be more willing to allow far more varied sexual experiences and still remain a couple, or devoted to one another."

There are, even within the sub-set of young people who consider fidelity old-fashioned, degrees of tolerance. A percentage cannot conceive of a timeless one-to-one relationship. A somewhat greater number can visualize an open but still serious relationship before marriage but would accept, and indeed expect, traditional mores once they were married.

The attitude to marriage, too, is ambivalent. Even among free-thinkers, marriage is, for many, the ultimate plan, if not ideal. Others would marry only if a child were involved, and a small group considered marriage unnecessary under any circumstances.

To the majority, fidelity and faithfulness had an implicit sexual meaning. Because many believed "the mystique built around sex is really trivial," adherence to the premise became both unimportant and meaningless.

"It's important for people to love other people," says Jennifer Prill, a 21-year-old senior at Hollins College. "If sex happens to be one way they want to communicate their love, I think that's all right. . . . To me, the important thing is the freedom not to put regulations on relationships.

"If I were married, I wouldn't mind my husband having another relationship as long as it didn't jeopardize ours. Intellectually, I think I could handle it and I would hope he would apply the same standards to me."

The philosophy of Karen Cronin that, despite the new morality, there was and should be a difference in attitude between relationships and marriage was common to many.

Miss Cronin, 25, an administrative assistant to a vice-president at Germaine Monteil Cosmetiques Inc., in New York, did not consider that a relationship entailed the same kind of commitment.

"There is technical commitment to one person until an engagement or a marriage," she said. "If I found that a friend of mine wanted to have another relationship, I might swallow hard but I couldn't say anything."

"If the girl I loved went off and had an affair with someone else, part of what that would be saying would be a certain lack of caring for me," he said. "But I could have a relationship or marry a girl who believed differently . . . sometimes the loved one has are fairly non-rational . . . Generally I would hope for fidelity and I would plan to be faithful because I would hope that one recognizes as one gets older that you can't have everything . . . that you have certain things that are very good."

The Germans were here for a two-day tour of Israel's holy sites, the state radio reported, adding that they would do their touring fully clothed.

My Son's Still a PoW, U.S. Mom Claims

CHICAGO (AP) — A Chicago mother is certain United States soldiers are being held as prisoners in Cambodia because she saw her son and other servicemen there.

"I saw my son for two minutes," Phyllis Allard said in a telephone interview Saturday night. "I touched him and I talked to him."

Specialist Richard M. Allard is listed as "missing in action" by the U.S. army. The Pentagon said Saturday night it was unaware of his being held in Cambodia.

Mrs. Allard said she decided to talk about her January, 1972, trip after Rev. Paul Lindstrom, who was chairman of the Remember the Pueblo Committee, claimed Wednesday that 200 Americans missing in action are being held captive in Cambodia and Laos.

John King, a state department spokesman, said, however: "There is no credible information available to us which would tend to support these charges."

The Pentagon claims that all Americans held by the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese in Cafbodia have been returned since the signing of the cease-fire agreement.

Mrs. Allard said she went to Indochina to seek word of her son, who disappeared in August, 1967, after his army helicopter crashed near the South Vietnamese-Cambodian border.

She said she and her three other childrn previously had identified Richard from film clips released by the Viet Cong.

She had been told by the army, however, that the identification was "inconclusive."

When she arrived in Pnomh Penh, she said, a group of Viet Cong took her to a prison camp which she would identify only as "in an area in Cambodia."

Before she was allowed to see her son, however, she was stopped by a man who Mrs. Allard believes was an official in the North Vietnamese Army.

MADE HER LEAVE

"'She doesn't belong here,'" she quoted him as saying. "And they made me leave."

On her way out, Mrs. Allard said, she saw a room full of prisoners.

From Cambodia, Mrs. Allard said, she went to Vientiane, the capital of Laos. At the North Vietnamese embassy, she spoke with Nguyan Quasing Tung, an official who suggested: "Why don't you go back to the Viet Cong?"

"So I went back," Mrs. Allard said. "I don't know if this is what he had in mind, but I used his name — I told the Viet Cong at the prison camp that 'Nyugan Quasing Tung said I could see my son.'"

"They took me into an area where it was like a hallway," she said. "They blindfolded me so that I wouldn't see and they walked me for just a minute or two into a room. I was there alone."

By this time, Mrs. Allard said, the blindfold had slipped off.

"Then an official and a man in uniform with a rifle helped my son into the room. They let go of him and I saw that he had difficulty walking. He was very weak.

"I went over to him to help hold him up and I touched him.

And I turned around and I said to the Viet Cong, 'Shame on you for treating these men the way you do; he can't stand up.'

"At first he didn't recognize me. When he heard me talk he looked up at me and realized it was his mother."

Mrs. Allard said Richard rebuked her for making the trip.

"He thought it was a mistake and I might get hurt," she said.

Mrs. Allard said the big question in her mind now is: "Since I saw him, why does our government continue to say there are no such places where our men are?"

15 HEARTS GET NUCLEAR BEAT

NEWARK, N.J. (UPI) — The Beth Israel Medical Centre today begins providing 15 heart patients with nuclear-powered pacemakers.

Nine of the operations were to be performed today and the other six Tuesday. Max Spieler, 68, Nutley, N.J., oldest of the group, was to be the first to receive the device.

Officials at Beth Israel said the nuclear pacemakers have a 10-year life span, compared with 18 months to two years for the conventional mercury battery pacemakers.

They said radiation emission from the atomic pacemakers, powered by radioactive plutonium 238, amount to less than that from a radium dial wristwatch or an annual chest X-ray. The mechanism is enclosed in a tiny box which has proven safe, the officials said.

A spokeswoman for the hospital said Beth Israel is one of two hospitals in the nation licensed by the Atomic Energy Commission to perform the operation. Only 52 such operations have been approved by the AEC.

Each of the 11 male and four female patients will be hospitalized six or seven days after the operation, the spokesman said. They will require weekly checkups and monthly examinations.

The checkups will be performed by means of a telephone monitoring system that resembles a small attache case the patients carry at all times. The patients will be able to telephone the hospital and have their cardiac activity monitored and recorded. Pacemakers have been monitored from as far away as Jerusalem using the system, officials said.

They're Worming Ahead To Handfuls of Profit

WHITE ROCK (CP) — Bill and Carol Kruse of White Rock had a slight setback last fall when about 70,000 earthworms ran away from home. Sunnyside Work Farm, to be specific.

Undaunted, the pair started again in early spring and now have about 180,000 of the critters, give or take a handful. They hope to increase the population to about two million worms, all on their 2½-acre "farm," to make it a paying proposition.

One thousand worms sell for $6. The price structure may change slightly as business picks up. The Kruses will probably sell by the pound (two pounds per thousand) when the job of counting them out individually gets out of hand.

"These earthworms aren't your ordinary angleworm," said Mrs. Kruse, who claims they prove superior on the end of a fish hook. They wiggle vigorously in a fresh mountain stream for up to 40 minutes, and stay alive for three hours or longer if properly hooked.

The secret is a light bulb, said Kruse. Worms like to roam at night, and even though the runaway 70,000 last year were kept in plyboard boxes 7 by 2 feet, they crawled over the 6-inch fence and made off into the nearby woods. The new batch is psyched into believing in eternal daylight with a 15-watt bulb overhead at night.

The worms are fed grain meal, ground to the consistency of flour, for fattening. They will eat anything organic, including manure.

The Kruse family went to California last year to make an informal study of worm farm management, and found farms all over the place. The demand there, said Kruse, was mostly from gardeners who find the worms aerate the soil and increase production. One commercial orchardist, said Mrs. Kruse, found his production doubled with a good crop of worms thriving under his fruit trees.

They raise them in manure and peat moss because it's easily available, but worms, according to California growers, like cardboard and newspapers just as well. They especially like the glue in cardboard, and don't mind a side dish of printers' ink.

HORSE JOINS BEEF ON BUTCHER'S SLAB

Kenneth Carlson, owner of Carlson's Meat Mart, said he already has received a call from a New York city hotel that intends to serve horsemeat.

Carlson said Saturday that he has received tentative permission from the department of consumer protection to sell horsemeat at his store.

Department inspectors were to visit the store today to see if the shop meets the requirements for cleanliness.

If they certify that it does, he said the first shipment of horsemeat would be delivered later in the day.

Beef Farm Backlash Seen

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) — Farmers may stop raising beef and hogs altogether if consumers don't recognize their right to financial security, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said in an interview Saturday.

Whelan, who was in the Woodstock area for a maple syrup festival, was commenting on last week's meat boycott by consumers groups protesting high meat prices.

"Two-thirds the population of Canada have the buying power to buy more beef for an hour's wages than they did 10 years ago," he said, adding that meat prices in Canada are not as high as in Europe.

Whelan said meat prices now have stabilized.

CLEAN LAKES FACE DELAY

WASHINGTON (CP) — Three congressmen, members of powerful House of Representatives conservation committees, said Saturday the U.S. will be unable to meet one of its major commitments to Canada in the joint efforts by those two countries to clean up the Great Lakes.

Representatives Henry Reuss of Wisconsin and Dante Fascell of Florida, both Democrats, and Republican Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, in a letter to Transportation Secretary Claude Brinegar, blame the U.S. Coast Guard for the situation.

The letter, released for publication Saturday, said "the long delay" by the coast guard in issuing regulations to implement the Environmental Protection Agency's no-sewage-discharge standards will "result in failure by the U.S. to meet one of its major commitments under its Great Lakes water-quality agreement with Canada."

The agreement was signed by Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon a year ago.

Reuss and Vander Jagt are chairman and ranking minority member of the House government operations committee's conservation and natural resources subcommittee. Fascell is chairman of the inter-American affairs subcommittee and a member of the conservation subcommittee.

The 1972 agreement called for the U.S. and Canada to issue "compatible regulations" governing the discharge of ship wastes into the Great Lakes by April 15, 1973.

In signing this agreement," the letter said, "President Nixon committed the United States to comply in full with its terms. But there does not appear to be any great urgency by the transportation department to meet this commitment."

When the EPA promulgated its standards last June, it announced that the coast guard would issue its implementing regulations by October, 1972.

The conservation subcommittee wrote former transportation secretary John Volpe in July, 1972, asking that the department act "with the utmost dispatch" to promulgate its regulations well in advance of the April, 1973, deadline.

Volpe replied Sept. 28, 1972, that his department could not meet the deadline but promised public hearings on the regulations in January, 1973. Later, he stated he could "foresee no reason" not to meet the April 15, 1973, deadline if public hearings were held in the preceding January.

The letter from the three congressmen states:

"Not only has the transportation department not held its public hearings as promised — it hasn't even published its proposed regulations for public comment."

"No explanation has been given the public for this delay, but we now understand that it may have been because of an impasse which developed between the coast guard and EPA last January over the meaning of the provisions of the 1970 law and EPA's no-discharge standard of June, 1972," the letter stated.

The 1970 amendments to the federal Water Pollution Control Act direct that EPA issue standards for devices to control sewage discharge from ships and that the coast guard issue regulations governing the design, construction, installation and operation of the devices.

In June, 1972, after first proposing a partial-treatment standard, the EPA finally promulgated a no-discharge standard.

The congressmen note that the coast guard has always preferred a partial-treatment standard and that last January coast guard officials wrote the EPA suggesting the matter be referred to the attorney-general for resolution.

"The coast guard apparently assumes that Congress intended that EPA permit some discharge from vessels . . . We disagree. We think it fair to say that the intention of Congress was to encourage the no-discharge standard," the congressmen wrote.

Flood Pressure Eased

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Part of the Mississippi River streamed into Lake Pontchartrain today to ease the strain on levees protecting New Orleans from "one of the big floods of the century."

Army Maj.-Gen. Charles C. Noble, head of the Mississippi River Commission, said the opening of Bonnet Carre Spillway 33 miles above New Orleans was the first of several possible emergency moves.

"We are prepared to open additional floodways if future developments require their use," he told a group of Washington officials Sunday.

A festive crowd of about 4,000 gathered on the levee to watch Senator Russell Long (Dem. La.) raise the first of the spillway dam's 350 sections. The Army Corps of Engineers said all sections will be open by Wednesday.

The open sections send water 5.7 miles down a trough of low land from the river to the 25-mile-wide salt-water lake, which empties into the Gulf of Mexico. When completely open, the spillway will divert about a sixth of the river's flow—estimated at 1.4 million cubic feet a second.

The opening was expected to lower the latest prediction of a crest of 20.2 feet at New Orleans, where the river gauge registered 18.2 feet Sunday.

At Slidell, La., the weather bureau's river forecasting centre said the diversion will stop the river's rise at New Orleans and probably drop the level to 17.5 by Wednesday.

About 7.3 million acres in seven states have been flooded, mostly due to overflow of tributary rivers backed up by the Mississippi, which drains 1.25 million square miles.

Backwater flood damage from St. Louis to the Gulf of Mexico totals at least $150 million, and the Corps of Engineers' extra flood work expenses were $8 million and going up, Noble said.

He estimated 6,000 families have been displaced temporarily by the high water.

Dismissal Appeal Quashed

An appeal against the firing of a Saanich policeman has been dismissed by the B.C. Court of Appeal in Vancouver, Victoria lawyer Cecil Branson says.

John Merrifield, 39, of 2306 Harbour, Sidney, was fired by the Saanich Board of Commissioners of Police June 26, 1972, for prolonged absenteeism.

On Sept. 19 Merrifield appealed the dismissal on the grounds that he was denied "natural justice." That appeal was argued by Branson before Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton in Victoria Supreme Court chambers.

Wootton upheld the method of dismissal by the police commission.

Branson said today he is expecting the appeal court's reasons for judgment in the near future.

Agnew Campaigner On Firm's Payroll

WASHINGTON (WP) — A former assistant secretary of the U.S. Air Force has said under oath that he was on an oil company's payroll while working as an advance man for the Nixon-Agnew campaign organization in 1968.

"Did you take leave of absence from your job?" Spencer J. Schedler was asked at a civil service commission hearing.

"No," Schedler replied. He did not elaborate.

The U.S. criminal codes make it unlawful for any corporation — or bank or labor union — to contribute directly or indirectly in connection with any federal election.

On March 6, Schedler testified before a commission examiner hearing the appeal for reinstatement of A. Ernest Fitzgerald, the former high U.S. Air Force official who blew the whistle on the $2 billion cost over-run on the giant C-5A transport plane.

Schedler testified he had been "director of budget" for Sinclair Oil until he became assistant secretary of the air force for financial management.

That appointment was announced May 18, 1969. His resignation was effective last Sunday.

Aide Takes Lie Test On Bugging

WASHINGTON (WP) — Former U.S. presidential special counsel Charles Colson last week took a lie detector test, the results of which support sworn statements that he had no advance knowledge of the Watergate bugging, according to reliable legal sources.

The sources said that Colson voluntarily took the test, answering five prepared questions. Richard Arthur, a New York lie detector expert, concluded that Colson's denial of involvement in the bugging of Democratic headquarters was "truthful," according to the sources.

The lie detector test was done privately at Colson's initiation and, as far as could be determined, without any independent observers present.

David I. Shapiro, Colson's attorney and law partner, confirmed that such a lie detector test had been given but declined to release the results.

Washroom Visit Ends in Jail

SHERIDAN, Colo. — The robber who held up Al Guiterrez' drive-in grocery Sunday did not get away, but he may have learned something of life's lesson about quitting when you're ahead.

The bandit, not identified by name, was armed only with a BB gun when he demanded that Guiterrez hand him cash from the register.

Guiterrez gave him the money and the robber used the store's pay telephone to call a getaway taxicab.

While the cab was en route, the outlaw went to use the store's bathroom, shutting the door behind him.

Guiterrez ran out of the store, locking the only door, and telephoned police. When they arrived, they were bombarded by pop bottles thrown by the bandit, who was eventually captured and jailed.

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb. — Deldon M. Hamann, an announcer for radio station KOTD, called a news agency Sunday with a story on a woman killed when her car was hit by a freight train. Hamann, 23, was killed a few minutes later when the same 18-car Missouri Pacific Train hit his car at a crossing on the station's property.

VATICAN CITY—South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu met Italian President Giovanni Leone today, then travelled by helicopter to the Vatican for an audience with Pope Paul VI while 5,000 policemen guarded the Vatican against anti-Thieu demonstrations by leftists. But when Thieu arrived at the Vatican, there were only about 150 demonstrators near St. Peter's Square and they quickly dispersed when police moved in.

BELLEVILLE, Mich. — For Pastor Fred Hanks of the Oakland Bible Baptist Church, Sunday's "pizza party" was a smashing success. "We had the second highest attendance at Sunday School in the history of the church," he said proudly after more than 700 persons shared in the eating of what was billed as the world's largest pizza, measuring 30 feet in diameter.

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — The Settich Brothers have claimed the world distance kite-flying record, but they aren't giving away any secrets about how they did it. Robert, 24, and John, 25, said Sunday they let out 10.5 miles of twine when they flew their 59-cent paper box kite. That distance surpasses the 6.7 mile flight listed in the 1973 Guiness Book of World Hecords as the highest. Guiness does not carry a record for length of string played out.

NEW YORK — Todd Fisher, 15-year-old son of actress Debbie Reynolds and her former husband, Eddie Fisher, accidentally shot himself in the leg early Sunday while handling an antique gun in his mother's New York apartment. Young Fisher was in hospital in satisfactory condition and Miss Reynolds was given a summons for possessing an unregistered firearm.

TORONTO — A Progressive Conservative member of Parliament says Prince Charles should be named Canada's next Governor-General.

Reg Stackhouse, member for the Toronto riding of Scarborough East, says in a speech delivered to the Monarchist League of Canada that appointment of a Governor-General from the Royal Family would help preserve "Canada's distinctiveness."

HARROGATE, England — Jack Reynolds told voters Sunday they should put him into office as a county councillor, not on his record but his talents. "The only reason I have been nominated," he said at an election rally, "is because I am a loud-mouth, obstinate, crafty and want my own way." He said these were ideal county councillor characteristics.

Durval Guimaraes, 39, exchanged gunfire with a burglar police said entered his home while Guimaraes was at a practice session.

Guimarae fell, wounded in the neck and the burglar fled.

LOS ANGELES — Tom and Dick Smothers, the popular brother comedy team whose television show was cancelled in 1969 when they ran afoul of the network, have won a $776,000 judgment against CBS.

The entertainers had sought $10 million in the breach of contract suit arising from the "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour." CBS filed a cross complaint demanding $1 million.

After five days of deliberations, the jury rejected the CBS action and awarded the damages to Tom and Dick Smothers.

LONDON — Tim Gauvain ejected from his jet fighter and after he had landed found he had shrunk.

Before he jumped he was six feet 2½ inches tall. Now he is six feet 1¼ inches.

"It's a funny feeling," said Gauain, 30, who left his Lightning jet at 10,000 feet over England's Yorkshire moors.

"My legs are still the same — it's my body that's shorter," he said, disclosing that his backbone had shortened and thickened.

A Royal Air Force medical expert said the lost height was evidently caused by the force of ejection.

No Election

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — The National Assembly ruled out Sunday the possibility of early elections in Pakistan by deciding to extend its life to 1977. The current assembly was elected in December, 1970, but met for the first time in April 1972, four months after the split with Bangladesh.

POOR GETTING POORER

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — The condition of people in the world's underdeveloped nations is worse now than a few years ago because of the "rich man's club" of the world's industrial nations, the moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada said Sunday.

Dr. Max Putnam said that while those problems exist he would not be told to "stay in church and preach."

Dr. Putnam said the industrialized countries drawing up the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) were imposing arbitrary policies on the world's less developed nations and were keeping them in a virtual state of bondage.

While the Canadian government gives only one-half of one per cent of its gross national product to foreign aid, there is much room for improvement, he said.

Government policies on foreign aid are similar to the position once taken on pollution, he said.

Governments do not want to legislate policy that would be costly to industry, but now that pressure has been applied governments are changing, he said.

"Nothing will happen until they are aware of the implications of ignoring the third world."

Dr. Putnam made the comments following a sermon Sunday.

65 Pilots At Rescue Sessions

Search and rescue of downed aircraft was the theme of a two-day training session for amateur pilots at Pat Bay airport Saturday and Sunday.

Sixty-five pilots from Vancouver Island took part in the lectures and flying exercises, sponsored by the Civil Defence Zone Air Service.

Two flying routes with signals along them were set up Sunday so pilots could test their ability to observe distress signals on the ground.

Later, the pilots were taken on a simulated rescue mission in the Buffalo, the armed forces' main search aircraft, and given a briefing by para-rescue men who man the Buffalo.

Lecturers were Capt. Ted Mills of the rescue co-ordinating centre in Victoria, Maj. Jim Simpson, operations officer of the armed forces' search and rescue squadron in Comox, and WO Jack Austad, a para-rescue expert from Comox.

Betty Wadsworth, president of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association and organizer of the exercise, said she hoped it would train private pilots so they would be able to help armed forces search for lost aircraft.

McCord Reports 'Lies', Mitchell Denies Link

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former U.S. attorney-general John Mitchell vehemently denied again today any advance knowledge of the Watergate bugging and both he and President Nixon's re-election organization branded as lies reports attributed to James McCord.

McCord, a convicted Watergate conspirator, was reported by Newsweek magazine to be ready to say publicly that Mitchell approved the June 17, 1972, break-in and bugging of Democratic National Headquarters.

The New York Times, in a separate report, said McCord had told a federal grand jury that a lawyer for the committee to re-elect the president, Kenneth Parkinson, channelled cash to Watergate defendants after arrest, to keep them quiet.

Mitchell issued a statement saying it was "a lie" that he approved the Watergate operation and the re-election committee said the report about Parkinson was "an absolute lie."

Mitchell accused news media of being irresponsible by giving "prominence to such blatant and false hearsay" and suggested that McCord "stop repeating third and fourth-hand information."

McCord, since his conviction, has offered to tell all he knows about the Watergate background to both a grand jury and senate investigators.

The re-election committee's chief spokesman Devan Shumway, said in response to the Times' report about Parkinson that he had talked with the attorney — who was said to be attending a meeting out of Washington — and that "he has adamantly denied that any such arrangement" existed as reported by the newspaper.

Quoting unnamed sources, the Times said McCord had based much of his testimony on heresay and said he was told about Parkinson's alleged role by Mrs. Dorothy Hunt, wife of Howard Hunt, who has also been sentenced in the Watergate case. The Times reported that McCord said Mrs. Hunt, who was killed in a plane crash last December, was the conduit for the money.

The paper said it was the first time a specific name of an official had been linked to cash payments to defendants following their arrests, although the payments themselves were reported three months ago.

MFA Sells Debentures

The Municipal Finance Authority of B.C. has sold a $12,824,000 issue of serial debentures, MFA Chairman Mayor Ron Andrews (North Vancouver District) announced Saturday in Vancouver.

Andrews said the debentures were bought by a syndicate headed by A. E. Ames and Co. Ltd. and Pemberton Securities Ltd.

The MFA borrows funds on behalf of regional districts and municipalities in B.C. Funds from the latest issue are for 16 municipalities in 13 different regional districts.

The issue, in Canadian funds, consists of $4,065,000 in 7¾ per cent serials maturing between 1974 and 1983 inclusive and $8,759,000 in 8⅛ per cent serials maturing between 1984 and 1993 inclusive.

Andrews said the authority was pleased with the favorable rate obtained for the issue in view of Friday's increase in short term rates in Canada.

The MFA has successfully marketed six issues worth $57.7 million in the last two years. All existing requests for funds have now been met.

Other members of the syndicate which purchased the issue are Dominion Securities Corp. Ltd., Richardson Securities of Canada, Merrill Lynch Royal Securities, Pitfield Mackay Ross and Co. Ltd., Greenshield Inc., Burgess Graham Securities Ltd., Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Royal Bank of Canada and the Bank of Montreal.

Pianist Wins Award Second Year in a Row

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The major pianoforte prize in Victoria Music Festival is the open championship trophy, the Victoria City Medallion.

It was awarded for the second successive year Saturday to Allen Reiser for his virtuoso performance of a Liszt Hungarian Rhapsody.

He also won the Kiwanis Club of Saanich Senior Award of $125 and the Henry Birks and Sons prize of a watch for his performance in the piano concerto class.

Runners-up, each of whom received a bursary, were Jackie Parker, James Sheridan and Susan de Burgh.

Male pianists dominated the open competition and there was one boy in each of the other three categories.

The senior championship was won by Jean MacRae for a Bach piece for which she has received a mark of 91 earlier in the week.

Theresa Lowe, Miranda Wong and Walter Prosshitz all won sight reading bursaries. The intermediate concerto class award was won by Miss Wong.

Adjudicator Clive Lythgoe announced that Reiser and Prossnitz will represent Victoria in the provincial music festival at Vancouver.

In the only other classes Saturday — piano ensemble — the team of Alexandra Rieche and Joy Hendrickson won the junior section with an 85 followed by Kirstin Olson and Shauna Baird and Jo-Ann Beeren and Teresa Lukaz with 83s. Duncan Macintyre and Alison Peake were next with 82. This was a class of seven entrants.

Karen Johnson and Lorraine Shepherd won the intermediate class with 86. Joanne Fryer and Valerie Hampton and Linda Cox and Kim George were second with 83s, followed by Miriam Curtis and Karen Hawkins and Jamie Disbrow and Rose Blaseckie with 82s.

Sands — Victoria

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

War on Measles Needs Help

In a news release from the American Medical Association, I read that Dr. P. J. Landrigan says that recently in Texarkana, a city on the border of Arkansas and Texas, and the vicinity, there was an epidemic of measles in which 633 youngsters got the disease.

Of these cases, 606 were in Texas, where the number of vaccinations against measles had been small. In Arkansas, where many children had been vaccinated, there was no epidemic. This shows what can be done by vaccination.

Doubtless thousands of mothers throughout the country will say, "But measles is something that every child has to get, so there is no need to worry." Or the mothers are simply too poor to take their children to a doctor, or too ignorant to know how important it is to have their children vaccinated. Fewer than half of the mothers in the poverty areas of our cities have had their children vaccinated.

But these mothers are unwise. In recent years, it has been discovered that a considerable percentage of children with ordinary measles get a bit of meningitis (an inflammation of the outer lining of the brain), which is not a good thing for the brain, and occasionally it can do the brainmuch permanent harm.

Also, children, when they get a severe attack of measles, lose quite a bit of time from school. Their illness can put a big strain on their mothers. As Dr. Landrigan says, when most mothers in a state get their children vaccinated against measles, very few cases of the disease show up.

Even more important is the wiping out of German measles. Why? As many people know, a pregnant woman who has German measles runs the risk of giving birth to a baby which is defective in one or perhaps many ways.

SHIP'S PROW JABS SEASIDE HOME

SHIMONOSEKI, Japan (AP) — Asaichi Amine, 67, was jolted out of bed today and found a ship's prow protruding into his seaside home.

"At first I thought it was a truck that struck my home," said Amine, who lives between a highway and the treacherous Kammon Strait, in southwest Japan.

The maritime safety agency said the 867-ton tanker Toko Maru was going through the strait when its engine failed.

Warning On Jailed Union Chiefs

MONTREAL (CP) — An explosion may soon erupt in Quebec if the government of Robert Bourassa is "not great enough to liberate" Louis Laberge, imprisoned leader of the Quebec Federation of Labor, QFL secretary Fernand Daoust said Sunday.

Mr. Daoust also called for special emergency meetings of all labor councils and union members across the province to decide the strategy for obtaining the labor leader's release from prison.

"But there is nothing excluded in what may happen. It's getting explosive and we may not have control of everything within 10 or 15 days," he said at a news conference.

"Government policy has been one of vengeance with the deliberate aim to muzzle the labor movement and harass it to death."

Laberge, Marcel Pepin, leader of the Confederation of National Trade Unions, and Yvon Charbonneau, head of the Quebec Teachers Corp., are serving one-year contempt of court sentences at Orsainville prison for their part in the last spring's public service strike.

Bank Note Producer Bought

OTTAWA (CP) — A $6 million shares purchase has turned Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd. into a majority-owned Canadian company, President Charles R. Worthen of Ottawa announced today.

Mr. Worthen announced purchase of 60 per cent of Canadian Bank Note shares from American Bank Note Co., formerly the sole owner. American Bank Note, a subsidiary of International Bank Note Co. of the U.S., retains 40 per cent of the shares in the Canadian operation.

Canadian Bank Note prints money and security documents.

Mr. Worthen said the purchase was arranged with payment of $3.6 million in cash and a loan of $2.4 million. The shares are privately held and not traded on any Canadian exchange.

Dwarf Dahlia Seeds Spectacular Starters

Growing the seeds of dwarf dahlias to flowering size is one of the more spectacular efforts in gardening for the beginner, whether adult or junior. If you have known this success yourself, give a child the chance, and the encouragement, to do the same this spring.

The astonishing thing is to sow dried-looking seeds in early April and have from each a miniature tuberous root produce a stout 10-inch stem, leaves and perfect miniature dahlia blooms during June.

Results will be earlier if the seeds have been sown earlier but that means giving great care to have overhead light and consistent temperatures for a much longer period.

The name of the seeds is Unwins Dwarf, Coltness Hybrids, or Dwarf Exhibition. You may get 15 or 20 seeds in a packet but each plant spreads 12 or 18 inches and may be the same height, with many flowers right through to frost if faded ones are picked promptly.

Sow the seeds singly in a circle around the edge of a shallow five or six-inch pot, or better, in separate two-inch pots bedded into damp peat to their rims to prevent drying out.

Cover with paper until the seeds sprout. Before they begin to straighten, give them a light window, not in full sun but in strong light. There is a great difference. The pot needs turning a third of a circle three times each day to prevent stretching of the seedlings to the stronger light outdoors.

At the two-leaf stage, put each seedling into a two-inch pot of humusy soil (if sown in one pot) keeping them damp.

Overhead light on a greenhouse bench encourages beneficial, slow upright growth, but lacking this, move the dahlia seedlings to a coldframe when four true leaves have developed.

Never allow the soil mixture to get dry, but avoid a wet condition for this rots the tiny tuberous rootstock before it can reach a useful size.

Remembering the amount of storage food needed to fill this little tuber, don't expect too much top growth of leaves and stem, though a certain area of leaf surface is necessary.

Dahlias will not endure frost. Even one degree harms young plants in spring so don't plan to put the plants into the garden until the last week of May.

As they fill the small pot with roots, transfer each root-ball (without upsetting the roots) to a four-inch pot of good soil. This gives ample space for the tuber which in turn will provide more food for top growth.

Even before the end of May you will notice a few flower buds. Keep the plants on the cool side out in the coldframe, with glass cover off for daytime. Put it on before dusk if a clear night is likely to bring frost by daybreak.

These dwarf dahlias are fine for balcony planters, patio tubs, small sunny beds. They may turn out to be all different colors. Tag them for color and keep the tubers for another year, planting them next time for better color blending.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal was played in 1970, during "The Trials" held in London, England. The aim of these annual trials is to select the team that will represent England in international competition. In this event, one of the world's greatest players, Terence Reese of London, was occupying the East seat. His comment, at the conclusion of play, was: "I missed a great opportunity to inscribe my name on the tablets of fame."

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 1 NT | Pass | 4 ♠ | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

After winning the opening lead with dummy's queen of hearts, declarer played the king of hearts, discarding a club, and then the ace of hearts. It was his intention to discard his remaining club on the third heart lead.

But Reese ruffed with the trump seven, and declarer overruffed with the eight. Next came a diamond to dummy's king, and this was followed by a diamond to South's ace. A third diamond lead was then ruffed in dummy.

The four-spade contract was now unbeatable. The board's remaining trump was led next, Reese winning his ace. From here in all the defenders could make were West's king of trumps and East's ace of clubs.

As Reese stated, he could have beaten the contract. When the third heart lead was made (at trick three), instead of ruffing with the seven of trumps, East should have (in retrospect) ruffed with the spade ace. On this trick South would have discarded his last club.

East would then have played back his remaining trump, and West would have cashed the king and jack, removing dummy's trumps. Declarer would eventually have been compelled to lose a diamond trick, to incur a one-trick set.

Actually, declarer could have fulfilled the contract on his own power. After winning the opening lead, he should have played the king of diamonds, the ace of diamonds, and then trumped his remaining diamond. Now he would lead the board's remaining to high hearts, and it would not matter whether East ruffed with the seven or the ace; if he ruffed with the ace, South would discard his last club. And if he ruffed with the seven, South would overruff and lead trumps, losing two trumps and a club.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Clare nodded. "So that makes it special? Well, you figure it out. I'm just four years younger than three times what you get if you add together the figure of my age."

Bachelor Life Given Boost

Ninety-six boys are already enrolled in the semester-long course, learning how to cook, sew, keep house and handle money.

Two Men Wed By Minister

BOSTON (AP) — Over the objections of his bishop, Rev. William E. Alberts, pastor of Old West Church, "married" two Boston men Saturday who met while studying for the United Methodist ministry.

Alberts said he performed the wedding uniting Robert C. Jones, 24, and Harry R. Freeman, 25, "as an expression of my ministry."

Bishop Edward G. Carroll, who had asked Alberts not to perform the ceremony "because of the ill effects it will have upon your fellow ministers, Old West Church and yourself," called the ceremony "a caricature of marriage."

Massachusetts does not issue marriage licences to persons of the same sex, "so the marriage is not legally sanctioned by either the state or the church."

The bishop said the United Methodist general conference last year recognized the right of homosexuals to live together "as consenting adults," but he added the conference did not "recommend marriage between two persons of the same sex."

The bishop told a reporter he would not strip Alberts of his credentials because 90 days notice must be given before the Massachusetts general conference "and there are only 60 days."

12 MILLION VEHICLES RECALLED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. auto industry recalled a record 12 million cars and trucks in 1972 — three million more than 1971, a U.S. transportation department survey showed today.

In 320 safety defect campaigns, the U.S. auto industry recalled 7.8 million vehicles. Foreign anto makers recalled 4.2 million, bringing the total number of vehicles recalled since 1966 to nearly 37 million.

In its annual report on automobile defect recalls, the transportation department said two auto makers accounted for more than 9 million of the recalled cars.

B.C. Aims to Lead Social Policy

BURNABY (CP) — Rehabilition Minister Norm Levi has asked British Columbia's social workers to submit critiques evaluating the NDP government's social policy.

He told about 80 people at the annual meeting of the B.C. Social Workers Association Saturday the government is trying to become a leader in Canadian social policy and asked social workers to "compliment, come with a brickbat or criticize" the government's plans.

Critics of the new rates have said they will discourage low income workers.

"To suggest that is is in some way wrong to pay a family of five $400 a month in welfare payments is, to my mind, ludicrous," said the minister.

He said that employers driven out of business by increasing minimum wage rates aren't running "much of a business."

The government wants to research a guaranteed income scheme assisted by money from a $5 million federal government program to promote study of minimum income levels he said.

Levi said the proposed study would assess the present situation and establish what levels of income are needed.

The rehabilitation minister said he would travel around province and discuss the social welfare situation and his program of integration of service with social workers.

Levi said he would like to see the government move away from one-year plans into two and three-year programs so workers would have more time to prepare better plans.

Reformed addicts and other volunteers should help with drug programs, he said adding that otherwise "we're never going to be able to pay for all the service necessary."

City Lawyer Heads Land Negotiations

Yukon Commissioner James Smith, or an elected member of the territory's cabinet committee, will also be on the team, Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien announced.

ALL-MEAT DOG DIET BRINGS SLOW DEATH

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Millions of dog owners are slowly killing their pets by believing sone dog food advertisements and feeding the animals all-meat diets, according to a Massachusetts Institute of Technology nutritionist.

Dr. Paul M. Newberne, professor of nutritional pathology and a veterinarian, says animal studies conducted at M.I.T. using off-the-shelf all-meat and meat by-products diets demonstrate the harmful effects on dogs, including liver, kidney and nutrition problems, if used exclusively.

Dogs, like humans, need a balanced diet that includes protein, carbohydrates, fat, vitamins and minerals, Dr. Newberne says. All-meat diets, he says, are mostly protein and fat and almost totally lacking in carbohydrates.

Industry Facing Curbs In Recreation Areas

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Legislation introduced today by Resources Minister Bob Williams will give the provincial government power to curtail industrial operations within designated "recreation areas" throughout the province.

Williams also announced establishment of 10 new provincial parks and a sizable addition to an eleventh. The park extensions have been promised by the NDP government since shortly after last August's election.

The legislation introduced by Williams gives the government power to "prohibit, regulate and control" such industrial operations as mines and logging projects within the eight recreation areas scattered throughout the province. The minister had announced previously a similar policy for resource use within the network of provincial parks.

A major aspect of the legislation is that it solidifies the existing boundaries of provincial parks, so that any boundary changes in the future can only be enacted by the legislative assembly after full debate.

Williams said this measure was incorporated as protection against shrinkage of existing parks as was allowed under the former Social Credit administration.

Atlin (900 square miles), Kwadacha (647) and Tatlatui (408), all in the northern part of the province;

St. Mary's Alpine (35), Top of the World (31), Elk Lakes (21) and Mt. Assiniboine (115), all in the southeastern corner of the province. The Mt. Assiniboine proposal is an extension of a park which already exists.

The total addition of park land is about 1.6 million acres, Williams said. This is a 25 per cent increase in the amount of crown land dedicated to park use. About six million acres of crown land are currently contained in provincial parks.

Williams said the park development by the NDP government "makes up for the lack of action over the last 20 years," under the last government.

He said the parks being established are of "national scale and importance and should have been allowed to proceed by the Socreds." When they were proposed by the parks department, the new park proposals were "invariably turned down," the minister said.

Williams said the legislation specifies that the parks branch will in future have the power to grant resource use permits within the eight recreation areas, which consist of a total of 274,000 acres.

Williams described recreation areas as those areas which have recreational potential but which are not owned by the crown. Land within these areas, he said, is usually owned privately.

War Chest 'Blown'

Times News Services.

BELFAST — Irish Republican Army officers have apparently spent $375,000 from their war chest on cars, houses and drink, rather than arms and aid for families of imprisoned comrades.

The money came from bank raids.

IRA commanders have suspended three companies of the 1st Provisional Battalion while the missing funds are investigated, according to sources close to the IRA.

First reports that some IRA men had been dipping into funds surfaced in the British press during the weekend.

These said British authorities intercepted a letter containing the allegations which was written by Provisional officer Liam Shannon who is held at the Maze prison near Belfast.

Shannon is reported to have named seven leading Provisionals still at large in Belfast who used IRA money for their own purposes.

Meanwhile, in Armagh, 32 miles southwest of Belfast, British troops shot and killed a gunman today in an exchange of fire. It was the second death in Northern Ireland in 12 hours.

A British soldier died earlier today from wounds received two months ago in a similar exchange of fire with gunmen.

CENTURIES-OLD ceremony of Blessing of the Fleet was held for the first time in Victoria's Inner Harbor Sunday, drawing a crowd of between 5,000 and 6,000. The crowds boarded the spanking clean fishboats, inspected gear and were given tips on how to catch the big ones. Members of the Pacific Trollers Association hope to make the event an annual highlight.

POWER CUT BY FALL?

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bernard Goldhammer, assistant administrator of Bonneville Power Administration, says dry winter weather in the northwest United States could mean residential power cutbacks by fall.

Goldhammer said the northwest area is facing the worst hydroelectric power shortage in 33 years due to sparse rain and a light snowpack. Industrial users would be affected first in a cutback.

Robert Ferris, general manager of the Intalco Aluminum plant in Bellingham, predicted widespread power cutbacks in the aluminum industry would result in 4,000 job layoffs. Ferris said 12,000 more workers in related industries also might be laid off.

BPA began some cutbacks in industrial power last week.

"Usually we can sell a surplus of about two million kilowatts to California," said Goldhammer, "but this year we'll have trouble holding our own."

Vietnam Pull-Out Hinted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Unless conditions in Vietnam "improve very substantially" following the death of a Canadian observer, the government will withdraw from the peace commission there, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons today.

He said that without an improvement, Canada would be involved in watching a war "at totally-unjustified human risk," instead of monitoring a ceasefire.

Officially informing the House of the death Saturday of the Canadian officer, Capt. C. E. Laviolette of Quebec City, Mr. Sharp criticized the Viet Cong for firing on the peace commission helicopters and then hindering searches for the wreckage.

Meanwhile two more helicopters assigned to ceasefire teams were fired on over the Mekong Delta today as Canadian members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision hinted it may withdraw from investigations in Viet Cong controlled territory following the death of a Canadian observer when another helicopter was shot down Saturday.

In today's incident, a spokesman for the Saigon command, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, said one of the helicopters was hit by six bullets. He said there was light damage and that no one was hurt.

But Hien said the helicopter landed near Vi Thanh, 98 miles southwest of Saigon, as a precautionary measure. Other military sources, however, said the helicopter was destroyed.

Michel Gauvin, chief of the Canadian Delegation to the International Commission for Control and Supervision said today the ICCS helicopter shot down Saturday had prior Viet Cong assurance that they would be safe.

"If guarantees of security are withheld by a party, can anyone expect the commission members to act?" Gauvin asked in a speech in the Saigon Lions' Club.

"Frankly," he continued, "we are not prepared to risk the lives of our officers because a party cannot, or will not guatantee their safety in the course of an investigation."

Nixon Seeks Tariff Powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will send to Congress Tuesday a formal reguest for authority to impose selective trade barriers against countries which he feels discriminate against United States goods.

Nixon also will meet at 8:30 Tuesday morning with the Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to discuss the bill.

Administration officials said previously that Nixon wants authority to negotiate reciprocal reductions in tariffs and other barriers to international trade.

But they said he also wants stand-by authority to increase imports if he believes a nation is not giving a fair chance to U.S. business or labor.

Plane, Embassy Hit by Arabs

Times News Services

NICOSIA — Arab guerrillas attacked an El Al Israel airliner and the home of the Israeli ambassador with bombs today. At least one Arab was killed and four were captured in the fighting.

Police said the simultaneous attacks at 6 a.m. Victoria time rocked the city with bomb blasts at the home of ambassador Rachamin Timor and touched off a gun battle at the International Airport outside Nicosia.

The twin explosions were said to have caused considerable damage to homes adjacent to those of the ambassador, but police said no one was hurt and two Arabs were arrested fleeing the scene.

The attack on a Viscount airliner that had just arrived from Tel Aviv touched off a running gun battle that raged for several minutes between guerrillas and security guards.

First police reports said one Arab was killed on the spot and as many as four were arrested.

An El Al spokesman in Tel Aviv said two or three other Arabs were captured in the shootout at the airport.

"The arabs took over a civil aviation jeep and drove up to the plane, a rented Viscount that had just arrived from Tel Aviv," he said.

"They fired a volley of shots at the plane but didn't hit anybody. One Arab was killed on the spot."

Earlier today Greek-Cypriot was killed and three policemen were wounded, when an armed group of Greek-Cypriots tried to storm a police station 30 miles west of Nicosia.

Bank Boosts Rate

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce today increased its minimum lending rate by one-half per cent to 6½ per cent, effective immediately.

The bank said no increase is contemplated, at this time, in the rate charged for its Bank-plan-personal loans.

The bank also said it will increase the interest paid on its savings accounts to 4½ per cent from four per cent, retroactive to April 1. Interest paid on chequing-savings accounts will increase one-quarter of one per cent to three per cent, effective May 1.

A spokesman for the bank said the rate increases have become necessary due to the continuing pressure for loans and are in "harmony with recent changes in the Bank of Canada's interest rate."

The Bank of Canada increased its lending rate by one-half per cent to 5.25 per cent Friday.

"No material change in the outlook for the bank's balance of revenue is anticipated as the increased revenue generated from loans will be more than offset by increased interest charges."

Second World War Bomb Kills 2 Boys in Vernon

Times News Services

VERNON — Two boys aged seven and nine were killed Sunday when a mortar shell they had picked up on an army testing ground unused since the Second World War exploded as they carried it home.

The deaths of Dwayne Williment and Bradley Hanke sparked demands here that the army make a thorough scouring of the range to prevent similar tragedies.

Ten years ago following the deaths of two other boys in a similar mishap, an army search turned up 84 live bombs on the range.

RCMP said similar objects turn up in the area frequently. They said farmers have reported plowing them up and youngsters have carried similar objects home.

Colonel David Carr, commanding officer at Canadian Forces Base Chilliwack, said a base security officer has been sent to the area to conduct an investigation.

He said if there is a possibility of other dangerous objects in the area the base may be closed.

Vernon RCMP Staff St. Bob Cruickshank described the bomb as a "cylindrical projectile" made of metal about eight inches long and 1½ inches in diameter. Bomb-type fins were attached to one end, he said.

Cruickshank said quite a few such mortar bombs have been found in the area during the last 10 years, "but we don't hear about them until they go off.

He warned anyone finding any strange-looking objects near the army site, about three miles south of Vernon, to "leave it alone" and call police.

A City Under Siege . . .

By H. D. S. GREENWAY

PHNOM PENH (WP) — Phnom Penh has become a sullen city. The insurgents are on the offensive and all the roads leading to the capital are cut.

The government first announced a state of siege and then, last week, a state of danger — the difference being that the government is allowed to shoot people during a state of danger.

On the surface, this city's life goes on much as usual, perhaps more slowly now in the season before the rains. Nowhere in the capital can one sense a state of siege. No one seems to feel the imminent danger that could be sensed in Hue during last year's Easter offensive. Refugees seem unlikely to pour out of Phnom Penh, perhaps because in Cambodia there is nowhere to go.

Instead there is a general malaise. The people seem to have lost confidence in their government, their country and even in themselves. There is a weariness and lethargy which is unusual even for Cambodia where torpor is a natural state.

"The population is disgusted, Monsieur," a civil servant said. "We are sad because the government has lost the power to help the people."

Delays in the arrival of supplies have caused fuel shortages and rationing and there are long lines of automobiles in front of all the city's gasoline stations.

There are also long lines of people with cans, bottles and pails waiting to buy kerosene for their lamps. The pumps are cranked by hand because every day the electricity fails with increasing frequency.

Kent Captures Medal

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Strokes from tee to green notwithstanding, the best thing Ricky Kent did Sunday to nail down medal honors in the CFAX Vancouver Island Open tournament was to carefully check his scorecard.

He gave away the medallist's prize once before and took no chances Sunday. He checked his card every-which-way before signing his name under a 71 that made Kent an easy winner of qualifying-round honors at Glen Meadows.

Kent, 17 at the time, had medal honors wrapped up in 1964 when he scored a 72 at Colwood. Playing scorekeeper Noel Pumfrey inadvertantly marked down a four on a hole where Kent actually took a birdie two. That's the way it had to stand after the signed card was turned in, and Uplands' Gord Pellow took the medallist's prize with a 73 while Kent's penalty-added score went up to a 74.

But even another two-stroke penalty wouldn't have hurt his standing Sunday. Playing superbly from tee to green, the 23-year-old Glen Meadows amateur was the only one of 166 starters to beat par on the 6,677-yard McTavish Road layout.

Scoring an eagle three on the ninth to take the turn one under par, Kent finished three strokes better than Cedar Hill's Greg Barnes, and four ahead of three other amateurs

Scores of 80 or better were required to fill the 32 championship berths. Three of the 80 shooters were drawn out, including a pair of notable casualties.

Two-time champion Norm Boden and Cedar Hill amateur Gord Rands were the big names missing the cut. Algo drawn out was Gorge Vale's Tom Maftechu

In addition to Boden, two other professionals failed to qualify. They were Colwood's Bill Court and Ron Cush, who plays out of Cedar Hill.

The qualifying-round test also proved difficult for all assistant pros except Uplands' Bill Billsborough, who made it under the wire with a 79. Missing the cut were Mike Parker of Victoria, Bruce Rands of Cedar Hill and Bill Penny of Glen Meadows.

Former Willingdon Cup player Mike Pyke, appearing in his first Island Open, and Colwood's Ken Floyd were other prominent amateurs missing out. Both scored 81s.

The cutoff for the handicap division broke off at exactly 75. All who scored net 75s or better made it into the first round of match play that begins next Sunday at Gorge Vale.

Oosterhuis Leads By Three Strokes

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Peter Oosterhuis, a globe-trotting Englishman of Dutch heritage who plays out of the Fiji Islands, stalked out of a scrambling pack with a four-under-par 68 and established a three-stroke lead Sunday in the rain-delayed third round of the 37th Masters golf classic.

The lanky Oosterhuis posted a 54-hole total of 211, five under par on the Augusts National Golf Club course that was still heavy from the 2.6 inches of rain that washed out Saturday's play and forced the scheduling of the final round for today.

The 6-foot-4 Oosterhuis only 24 but already one of Britian's ranking stars, was two strokes back of the leading quartet when play started, grabbed a share of the lead with an eagle three on the second hole, was four strokes behind at the turn, tied again only three holes later and then pulled away with dramatic putting down the stretch.

Jack Nicklaus, meanwhile, took an incredible triple-bogey eight on the 15th hole but rallied for a 73, insisted he still had a chance despite his 219 total, eight back.

Osterhuis was one of six players who either led or shared the lead in the frantic scrambling as the pressure began building in this, one of the world's four major tests of golfing greatness.

J. C. Snead, a raw-boned 31-year-old nephew of veteran Sam Snead; Jimmy Jamieson, who first came to national attention when he challenged in the 1972 Masters, and veteran Bob Goalby, the 1968 winner of this tournament, were the closest at 214.

Jamieson closed with a 70, Goalby had a 71 and Snead had difficulties on the back nine for a 73.

On the 15th Oosterhuis began his incredible putting, the sort of display that so often wins on the usualy slick, lighting fast greens of Augusta National.

He came out of a fairway bunker on the par-five hole, pitched to about 18 feet and holed the downhill putt. On the 16th he missed the green, chipped back poorly but made a 15-footer to save par.

At the 17th he put his approach 18 feet from the cup, made the putt and was five under.

Swift Switch in Pits Pays Off for Forsythe

Does an eight-minute transmission change for an automobile sound impossible?

Maybe, but that's what Terry Forsythe and his pit crew managed to accomplish before Forsythe went out to win both the super-stock fast heat and main event during the season-opening car racing program Sunday at Western Speedway.

Forsythe and crew had to complete what might be a record switch immediately after the qualifying runs.

One official record was set, this one for season-opening attendance — 3,973 fans.

Forsythe led the 35-lap main event from about the fifth lap but was passed by Ron Hancock on the 15th circuit. Hancock stayed in front for another four laps before brushing another car and losing four positions. Forsythe, running a close second at the time, took over the lead and stayed out front the rest of the way.

Roy Haslam, who set fast time during time trials of 18:08 seconds, passed Bob Collins on the final turn of the last lap to place second. Collins finished third and Hancock recovered to place fourth.

Life Without a Steak? —The Vegetarian View

It seemed a moderately witty notion, in view of the current alarms over the high cost of meat, to look into the possibilities of becoming a vegetarian and I wish someone would break both my arms when I get these ideas.

I had enlisted the help of the two couples I know who eat no meat, as a dietary way of life, warning them that my interest was mainly if not entirely journalistic, and before you could say "Medium rare" my desk was groaning under the weight of periodicals, tracts, studies, surveys and books that may just possibly be the most persuasive of any ever printed.

I should say right here at the beginning that the very idea of Bean Burgers, Peanut-Sesame Loaf Supreme, Nutty Noodle Casserole, Vegetarian Enchiladas, Savory Onion Quiche and Crunchy Granola causes my taste buds actual physical pain, but the arguments for vegetarianism are so downright compelling that it may be weeks before I can bite into a small steak without feeling guilt. It may be weeks before I can afford one, too, but that's beside the point.

If there is a degree of fanaticism in the vegetarian's arguments or a tendency to become evangelical it is only because both of the principal reasons for embracing it make a lot of sense.

With some, you see, it began with a revulsion over the killing of innocent beasts for human consumption ("this gnawing and slobbering over animal flesh," as one puts it), but there are many more who, less emotionally, have given up flesh to search consciously for a diet pattern that will offer something more sensible than our present food consumption ("the malnutrition of gluttony" as another describes the way we eat).

It's not an easy way to go, in either case, as an alternative. You do not simply pop some nuts into your mouth or spoon in some yogurt. It requires an encyclopedic knowledge of nutrients and some imaginative improvising to provide a menu that won't be dull.

Both the wives I've consulted agree that shopping and the preparation of meals are more time-consuming and demanding than they are for the woman who simply obeys her whims in the supermarket. That probably explains why there's a wide variety of literature on the subject, one book, "Diet For A Small Planet" by Frances Moore Lappe, being required reading.

The aim is to find that magic formula of proteins, the building bricks of body tissues, that will check the more or less constant process of breaking down and wearing out that, it seems, happens to your poor old body and mine.

The vegetarians say — and demonstrate only too well — that we over-indulge in carbohydrates and refined sugars, that we're "starch-eaters and the sugar-babies" existing on a diet that makes fat and flab, weak hearts and under-sized muscles. One of the meaner spokesmen of the breed has described the way we eat as similar to running a Rolls-Royce on paraffin.

The soya bean, the peanut, the sunflower seed and yeast aren't simply substitutes for protein meat, but are richer in protein content, pound for pound, than anything you'll find at your friendly neighborhood butcher's.

Harcourt Roy, the most articulate guru of the non-meat-eaters, puts it all very succinctly and with that characteristic enthusiasm that I have found almost irresistible: "Your long-term aim is to reduce the starches and sugars, increase the proteins, plus, of course, the vitamin-rich fruits, vegetables and salads. Your body will love you for it. In fact, you'll feel so frisky that you will have to check your birth certificate to find out if you really are the same person. You could become a menace."

With many, of course, it goes deeper than that. They see the day when the continued use of the cow, calf, steer, pig and chicken will simply be so uneconomical that they'll be obsolete. Canada Packers can't say they haven't been warned.

Edward T. Banks, another immensely persuasive writer on the subject, says, "The world will not be able to sustain life, at the present rate of population expansion, by means of the wasteful method of providing something like eight tons of vegetable food for an animal in order to produce one ton of chemicalized meat."

It's a point that's a kind of catechism with vegetarians — they'll tell you, for example, that the world acreage of food production lands could be doubled if we relied on growing rather than grazing — but down deep they've a realistic pessimism.

The fact they recognize is that most of us are disinterested in diet for purely nutritional reasons, that we've a kind of sensual pleasure in eating, dictated by habit and custom, that we're push-overs for the taste manipulators, slaves to a sizzling steak, whatever the cost, and I am very much afraid that they are right.

Better Bus Service Eyed

Bus service in Greater Victoria is being improved with extension of most runs on week-day and Saturday evenings effective May 4.

The announcement came today from Municipal Affairs Minister Jim Lorimer, who said the extensions are possible using the existing fleet of urban buses.

The changes in Victoria will see buses on most routes running every 40 minutes between the hours of 6 p.m. and midnight. Current service on most runs is hourly between those hours.

The Gordon Head service remains with buses every 30 minutes and Cadboro Bay service will remain hourly.

Service on Sundays will be increased with buses running every 40 minutes between 8:40 a.m. and 10:40 p.m. This replaces the existing service which ran from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Lorimer said the changes will take effect May 4. Similar changes are planned for the Greater Vancouver area.

The beefed up service will require services of about six new drivers, according to a B.C. Hydro official. But no cost figures are available yet.

He said the route time increases announced by Lorimer covered most of the changes but a few final details may be announced later.

Saanich Taxpayers Face Hike

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Saanich aldermen tonight begin their annual series of budget-trimming sessions with a view to cutting the fat off what looks like a 5.5 mill tax increase.

If the trend since 1970 holds true, council will likely aim at keeping the increase to around three mills, or $461,430 in a provisional budget requiring $7.5 million to be raised by taxation, out of total estimated revenue of $18.35 million.

The rest of this week is clear for additional meetings of council if required, but Mayor Hugh Curtis said aldermen would "more than likely" have the 1973 budget set in three consecutive evenings.

"I couldn't guess how we will end up," Curtis said, "but I don't think any member of council will tolerate a 5.5 mill increase."

Ald. Leslie Passmore, chairman of finance committee, said he could not estimate how much council would trim. As far as he was concerned the budget estmates prepared by departments and examined by department heads, comptroller, municipal administrator and committee chairmen was calculated closely already.

He guessed the additional amount required from general taxation would cost an average homeowner about $40, less the $15 increase on this year's provincial homeowner grant.

The amount of tax revenue which one mill will raise in 1973 is $153,810, compared with $146,775 in 1972.

Revenue increases this year, other than what will be raised by direct tax on property, amount to only $2 per capita, or less than one mill — $120,080.

On the debit side, Saanich along with other municipalities, must pay more for social assistance benefits this year. The exact amount has not been apportioned, but the provisional budget allows for $831,500 as the municipal share, compared with $810,000 in the 1972 budget.

Curtis said the increased amount will apply to only seven months of the year, starting June 1.

He said the 5.5 mill proposed increase in budget estimates is the smallest in at least four years.

In 1970 council trimmed a 6.66 mill increase to 4.9 mills; in 1971 they cut 7.32 down to three, and last year cut 6.69 to 2.5.

Curtis' own view of municipal priorities remains as it was a year ago:

"We must attempt to keep drainage work at its highest possible level," both to ease the risk of winter flooding of residential property, and to "lay the proper foundation for road construction later."

There will be no significant staff increases this year, the mayor indicated, but the police budget is up $180,590, the fire budget up $177,619 and the Saanich share of Greater Victoria Public Library costs up by $70,000, including provision for a new Saanich branch.

In addition, Saanich will open its fourth major recreation facility in May, and council faces a substantial list of requested grants from community organizations, a total of $116,380 compared with $83,500 actually granted last year.

Charge Laid In Hit-Run Fatality

John Hudson, 48, of 743 Massie, was today charged with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, in which a female pedestrian died Saturday.

Hudson was remanded to April 17 without plea, to seek legal advice.

Colwood RCMP said today a man turned himself in 12 hours after the accident following the death of 46-year-old Ella Howard of 17 Edgewater Motel.

The man told RCMP he had heard they were looking for a damaged 1964 Pontiac in connection with the hit and run, near Parsons's Bridge.

The dead woman's companion, Oliver Memnook, 37, of 957 Menzies, injured in the accident as he walked along the old Island Highway at 1 a.m., Saturday. He is reported in good condition in Victoria General Hospital today.

CITY STANDS FIRM

Harbor for People Concept Favored

The city has no intention of changing its mind on establishment of a new ambulance service, Ald. Percy Frampton said today after meeting with spokesmen for employees of Garden City Ambulance.

Frampton, who chairs Victoria council's health committee, said he didn't think the employees even hoped they could get council to abandon their plans.

The Garden City employees had earlier threatened to walk off their jobs today if no meeting was set up with city. They issued that ultimatum Friday after learning that a new ambulance service would be set up July 1 to handle the city's emergency needs.

The city plan calls for the new service to be operated out of Victoria General Hospital on an interim basis, with the prospect of a regional service ultimately being organized by the provincial government.

Garden City has served the city's emergency needs since 1968, but their $60,000 a year contract expires June 30.

"The men are just concerned about their jobs," Frampton said. "I assured them they would have every opportunity to apply for a position at Victoria General.

"We never intended to just use staff already at the hospital," he said, "and anyone can apply for the job."

Ed Pheifle, one of nine Garden City employees, said earlier it would be foolish for the hospital to train new drivers when he an dhis co-workers were already trained and experienced.

The new service will require a staff of six to operate the single ambulance the city intends to buy.

City of Victoria aldermen interviewed today say they like architect Arthur Erickson's suggestions for development of the Inner Harbor, but have some doubts about cutting it off with a walkway.

Erickson showed a preliminary design to city officials and downtown businessmen last week to get feedback for his $35,000 general plan. He requested the meeting be kept confidential to prevent controversy.

Features of the presentation were: one-way traffic and wider sidewalks on Government and Wharf; dense building on the city's Ocean Cement site; an amphitheatre-type suntrap where the Blackball ferry now is; and a pedestrian causeway from Laurel Point to Wharf Street turning the Inner Harbor into a non-tidal water.

The designs appeared to scotch Ald. Sam Bawlf's plans for a traffic-free mall on Government Street, but Bawlf was not available for comment today.

Ald. Clyde Savage said he approved of Erickson's general concept that the Inner Harbor should be developed for people. Asked about the apparent end of Government mall plans, Savage said: "Thank goodness."

Building development at the Ocean Cement sit should go ahead only if the Reid Centre next door does not materialize, Savage said. If the Centre is built, the site should become a park.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said he thought Erickson's attitude to traffic on Government and Wharf was "realistic," and he thought the causeway link suggestion was "an attractive idea."

"I think he's on the right track — creating a more formal area fronting the parliament buildings and hotels," Anderson said.

Ald. Mike Young said he thought plans for a Government Street mall had been scrapped by Erickson "in concert with the city."

The causeway link Young said was "an interesting idea," although he did not like the suggestion of tidal locks.

The link would be important, however, "particularly if we make development on the Ocean Cement site at the density proposed."

He expressed the reservation that the whole scheme handed everybody round the harbor "something on a tremendous plate."

"Really we are giving the Empress a new lease of life as well as removing an unproductive piece of property from Marathon (waterfront on Belleville). They should give that to the city."

Erickson's proposals were "a development of council's concepts," Young said.

Ald. Percy Frampton said he "rather enjoyed" the proposals and found them "refreshing."

The causeway link was "interesting" but Frampton feared cutting boats off from the inner area. Narrowing of Government Street he said was not a good idea, but he liked the suggestion of planting trees along the lower-level walkway currently being built.

Ald. Tom Christie said he was of two minds about the causeway link idea. He did not like to shut off the inner area to traditional pleasure craft, but "making a pond has a sort of appeal." In a long view a close look would have to be taken at the finances, he said.

Hikers Alarmed, Cougar Shot

A cougar was shot near Jordan River Sunday after it frightened three hikers on the trail to Somberio Beach.

George Pedneault, a Sooke game hunter was called in to shoot the animal about 4 p.m. after the hikers had stunned it with a rock earlier in the afternoon.

Bertha Davies, wife of one of the hikers, said today cougars are seldom seen by people in the area but this animal was "very thin and probably hungry."

She said her husband George was walking up the 1½-mile trail when an animal brushed up against his legs. He apparently thought it was a dog as first and took no notice of it.

When Davies realized it was a cougar he screamed and frightened the animal which then started jumping and snarling at the hikers.

When the cougar retreated to a creek bed Mrs. Davies said her husband threw a rock which hit the animal on the side of the head leaving it stunned.

The hikers then hurried up the remainder of the trail and called Pedneault who found the cougar up a tree when he came back to shoot it.

"There's a lot of children and hippie kids living at the beach," Mrs. Davies said, "and they've been frightened by the cougar's tracks."

House Blaze Injures Woman

Muriel Pattle, of 2-320 Moss, was in good condition today in Victoria General Hospital, where she had been treated for smoke inhalation.

Saboteur Burns Cathedral Ballots

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

It was a clear cut case of sabotage at St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral Sunday.

When scrutineers went Sunday evening to count votes by 1,500 parishioners on their choice for a color scheme for the exterior of the cathedral, they found nothing but ashes in the ballot box.

Parish council chairman Frank Pellizzon said the ballot box had been pried open after the 5 p.m. Mass, the ballots burned, and the ashes left in the box.

Parishioners had been asked to choose one of five color schemes, samples of which had been painted and numbered on the windows of the View Street side of the building.

They dropped their votes in the ballot box, located at the back of the church after each Mass on Sunday.

The painting was to have begun early this morning after the votes were counted, "but now we'll have to wait a week," said Pellizzon.

"I don't have any idea why anyone would do such a thing."

The council has scheduled another balloting to take place this Sunday and ballot box security will be tightened somewhat, "but we don't expect it to happen two times in a row," he said.

Pellizzon asks that all parishioners cast their votes again next week. The same procedure will be followed.

Choices include moss green and gold, moss green and mauve, gold and two shades of green, and a combination of salmon, gun metal grey and yellow.

"I think our parishioners are going to be awfully disappointed when they find out, but we'll just have to try it again," said Pellizon adding that most became "really involved" in choosing a color scheme.

Sands — Victoria

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

Industry Facing Curbs In Recreation Areas

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

Legislation introduced today by Resources Minister Bob Williams will give the provincial government power to curtail industrial operations within designated "recreation areas" throughout the province.

Williams also announced establishment of 10 new provincial parks and a sizable addition to an eleventh. The park extensions have been promised by the NDP government since shortly after last August's election.

The legislation introduced by Williams gives the government power to "prohibit, regulate and control" such industrial operations as mines and logging projects within the eight recreation areas scattered throughout the province. The minister had announced previously a similar policy for resource use within the network of provincial parks.

A major aspect of the legislation is that it solidifies the existing boundaries of provincial parks, so that any boundary changes in the future can only be enacted by the legislative assembly after full debate.

Williams said this measure was incorporated as protection against shrinkage of existing parks as was allowed under the former Social Credit administration.

Atlin (900 square miles), Kwadacha (647) and Tatlatui (408), all in the northern part of the province;

St. Mary's Alpine (35), Top of the World (31), Elk Lakes (21) and Mt. Assiniboine (115), all in the southeastern corner of the province. The Mt. Assiniboine proposal is an extension of a park which already exists.

The total addition of park land is about 1.6 million acres, Williams said. This is a 25 per cent increase in the amount of crown land dedicated to park use. About six million acres of crown land are currently contained in provincial parks.

Williams said the park development by the NDP government "makes up for the lack of action over the last 20 years," under the last government.

He said the parks being established are of "national scale and importance and should have been allowed to proceed by the Socreds." When they were proposed by the parks department, the new park proposals were "invariably turned down," the minister said.

Williams said the legislation specifies that the parks branch will in future have the power to grant resource use permits within the eight recreation areas, which consist of a total of 374,000 acres.

Williams described recreation areas as those areas which have recreational potential but which are not owned by the crown. Land within these areas, he said, is usually owned privately.

ART LOVERS throughout the world united today to mourn Pablo Picasso, the Spanish-born genius who thrust the art world into the 20th Century. Picasso died Sunday of a heart attack at his estate on the French Riviera. Picasso had been in good health and just hours before his death was a genial host at a small dinner party and later worked in his studio until the small hours of Sunday morning. When he awakened Sunday he complained of chest pains and was dead when his doctor arrived 10 minutes later. Obituary, Page 3.

War Chest 'Blown'

Times News Services

BELFAST — Irish Republican Army officers have apparently spent $375,000 from their war chest on cars, houses and drink, rather than arms and aid for families of imprisoned comrades.

The money came from bank raids.

IRA commanders have suspended three companies of the 1st Provisional Battalion while the missing funds are investigated, according to sources close to the IRA.

First reports that some IRA men had been dipping into funds surfaced in the British press during the weekend.

These said British authorities intercepted a letter containing the allegations which was written by Provisional officer Liam Shannon who is held at the Maze prison near Belfast.

Shannon is reported to have named seven leading Provisionals still at large in Belfast who used IRA money for their own purposes.

Meanwhile, in Armagh, 32 miles southwest of Belfast, British troops shot and killed a gunman today in an exchange of fire. It was the second death in Northern Ireland in 12 hours.

A British soldier died earlier today from wounds received two months ago in a similar exchange of fire with gunmen.

CENTURIES-OLD ceremony of Blessing of the Fleet was held for the first time in Victoria's Inner Harbor Sunday, drawing a crowd of between 5,000 and 6,000. The crowds boarded the spanking clean fishboats, inspected gear and were given tips on how to catch the big ones. Members of the Pacific Trollers Association hope to make the event an annual highlight.

POWER CUT BY FALL?

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Bernard Goldhammer, assistant administrator of Bonneville Power Administration, says dry winter weather in the northwest United States could mean residential power cutbacks by fall.

Goldhammer said the northwest area is facing the worst hydroelectric power shortage in 33 years due to sparse rain and a light snowpack. Industrial users would be affected first in a cutback.

Robert Ferris, general manager of the Intalco Aluminum plant in Bellingham, predicted widespread power cutbacks in the aluminum industry would result in 4,000 job layoffs. Ferris said 12,000 more workers in related industries also might be laid off.

BPA began some cutbacks in industrial power last week.

"Usually we can sell a surplus of about two million kilowatts to California," said Goldhammer, "but this year we'll have trouble holding our own."

Vietnam Pull-Out Hinted

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Unless conditions in Vietnam "improve very substantially" following the death of a Canadian observer, the government will withdraw from the peace commission there, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp told the Commons today.

He said that without an improvement, Canada would be involved in watching a war "at totally-unjustified human risk," instead of monitoring a ceasefire.

Officially informing the House of the death Saturday of the Canadian officer, Capt. C. E. Laviolette of Quebec City, Mr. Sharp criticized the Viet Cong for firing on the peace commission helicopters and then hindering searches for the wreckage.

Meanwhile two more helicopters assigned to ceasefire teams were fired on over the Mekong Delta today as Canadian members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision hinted it may withdraw from investigations in Viet Cong controlled territory following the death of a Canadian observer when another helicopter was shot down Saturday.

In today's incident, a spokesman for the Saigon command, Lt. Col. Le Trung Hien, said one of the helicopters was hit by six bullets. He said there was light damage and that no one was hurt.

But Hien said the helicopter landed near Vi Thanh, 98 miles southwest of Saigon, as a precautionary measure. Other military sources, however, said the helicopter was destroyed.

Michel Gauvin, chief of the Canadian Delegation to the International Commission for Control and Supervision, said today the ICCS helicopter shot down Saturday had prior Viet Cong assurance that they would be safe.

"If guarantees of security are withheld by a party, can anyone expect the commission members to act?" Gauvin asked in a speech in the Saigon Lions' Club.

"Frankly," he continued, "we are not prepared to risk the lives of our officers because a party cannot, or will not guarantee their safety in the course of an investigation."

Nixon Seeks Tariff Powers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon will send to Congress Tuesday a formal request for authority to impose selective trade barriers against countries which he feels discriminate against United States goods.

Nixon also will meet at 8:30 Tuesday morning with the Democratic and Republican congressional leaders to discuss the bill.

Administration officials said previously that Nixon wants authority to negotiate reciprocal reductions in tariffs and other barriers to international trade.

But they said he also wants stand-by authority to increase tariffs if he believes a nation is not giving a fair chance to U.S. business or labor.

Drug Bill Read

Legislation to set up the provincial government's recently announced Alcohol and Drug Commission, which will co-ordinate all provincial efforts in dealing with the problem of drug dependency, was introduced today by Rehabilitation Minister Norman Levi and given first reading in the legislature.

Levi told reporters the five-member commission, under a full-time chairman, will administer all money now being spent through five departments of the provincial government and will also ensure that all federal government funds available to B.C. for drug dependency programs are integrated in the provincial program.

He said figures compiled by the B.C. Research Council show that some $3 million in provincial governments grants is now going to 84 separate agencies dealing with various aspects of treatment and research for addicts. That includes about $400,000 from the perpetual fund for drug, alcohol and tobacco education set up by the previous Social Credit administration.

All these funds, Levi said, together with any others from consolidated revenue which receive legislature approval will be under the control of the commission.

Levi said the commission, which he hopes will be functioning by June — will get applications for government assistance and its field staff will work through the proposed network of community resource centres in identifying areas' individual needs and then setting up local community programs.

Plane, Embassy Hit by Arabs

Times News Services

NICOSIA — Arab guerrillas attacked an El Al Israel airliner and the home of the Israeli ambassador with bombs today. At least one Arab was killed and four were captured in the fighting.

Police said the simultaneous attacks at 6 a.m. Victoria time rocked the city with bomb blasts at the home of ambassador Rachamin Timor and touched off a gun battle at the International Airport outside Nicosia.

The twin explosions were said to have caused considerable damage to homes adjacent to those of the ambassador, but police said no one was hurt and two Arabs were arrested fleeing the scene.

The attack on a Viscount airliner that had just arrived from Tel Aviv touched off a running gun battle that raged for several minutes between guerrillas and security guards.

First police reports said one Arab was killed on the spot and as many as four were arrested.

An El Al spokesman in Tel Aviv said two or three other Arabs were captured in the shootout at the airport.

"The Arabs took over a civil aviation jeep and drove up to the plane, a rented Viscount that had just arrived from Tel Aviv," he said.

"They fired a volley of shots at the plane but didn't hit anybody. One Arab was killed on the spot."

Earlier today a Greek-Cypriot was killed and three policemen were wounded when an armed group of Greek-Cypriots tried to storm a police station 30 miles west of Nicosia.

Bank Boosts Rate

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce today increased its minimum lending rate by one-half per cent to 6½ per cent, effective immediately.

The bank said no increase is contemplated, at this time, in the rate charged for its Bank-plan personal loans.

The bank also said it will increase the interest paid on its savings accounts to 4½ per cent from four per cent, retroactive to April 1. Interest paid on chequing-savings accounts will increase one-quarter of one per cent to three per cent, effective May 1.

A spokesman for the bank said the rate increases have become necessary due to the continuing pressure for loans and are in "harmony with recent changes in the Bank of Canada's interest rate."

The Bank of Canada increased its lending rate by one-half per cent to 5.25 per cent Friday.

"No material change in the outlook for the bank's balance of revenue is anticipated as the increased revenue generated from loans will be more than offset by increased interest charges."

Second World War Bomb Kills 2 Boys in Vernon

Times News Services

VERNON — Two boys aged seven and nine were killed Sunday when a mortar shell they had picked up on an army testing ground unused since the Second World War exploded as they carried it home.

The deaths of Dwayne Williment and Bradley Hanke sparked demands here that the army make a thorough scouring of the range to prevent similar tragedies.

Ten years ago following the deaths of two other boys in a similar mishap, an army search turned up 84 live bombs on the range.

RCMP said similar objects turn up in the area frequently. They said farmers have reported plowing them up and youngsters have carried similar objects home.

Colonel David Carr, commanding officer at Canadian Forces Base Chilliwaek, said a base security officer has been sent to the area to conduct an investigation.

He said if there is a possibility of other dangerous objects in the area the base may be closed.

Vernon RCMP Staff St. Bob Cruickshank described the bomb as a "cylindrical projectile" made of metal about eight inches long and 1½ inches in diameter. Bomb-type fins were attached to one end, he said.

Cruickshank said quite a few such mortar bombs have been found in the area during the last 10 years, "but we don't hear about them until they go off.

He warned anyone finding any strange-looking objects near the army site, about three miles south of Vernon, to "leave it alone" and call police.

A City Under Siege . . .

By H. D. S. GREENWAY

PHNOM PENH (WP) — Phnom Penh has become a sullen city. The insurgents are on the offensive and all the roads leading to the capital are cut.

The government first announced a state of siege and then, last week, a state of danger — the difference being that the government is allowed to shoot people during a state of danger.

On the surface, this city's life goes on much as usual, perhaps more slowly now in the season before the rains. Nowhere in the capital can one sense a state of siege. No one seems to feel the imminent danger that could be sensed in Hue during last year's Easter offensive. Refugees seem unlikely to pour out of Phnom Penh, perhaps because in Cambodia there is nowhere to go.

Instead there is a general malaise. The people seem to have lost confidence in their government, their country and even in themselves. There is a weariness and lethargy which is unusual even for Cambodia where torpor is a natural state.

"The population is disgusted, Monsieur," a civil servant said. "We are sad because the government has lost the power to help the people."

Delays in the arrival of supplies have caused fuel shortages and rationing and there are long lines of automobiles in front of all the city's gasoline stations.

There are also long lines of people with cans, bottles and pails waiting to buy kerosene for their lamps. The pumps are cranked by hand because every day the electricity fails with increasing frequency.
